

Ramadan visits S. Arabia, Kuwait

BAHRAYN (R) — Iraq's First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan left Saudi Arabia Sunday after an overnight visit during which he conferred with King Fahd and other Saudi leaders. The Saudi Press Agency gave no details, but said the visit was for consultations on Arab issues. Mr. Ramadan, who was accompanied by the Iraqi Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Hamid Alwan, later arrived in Kuwait and delivered a letter from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to the Emir Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah. There has been no official reaction to the Iranian attack on Iraq from Saudi Arabia and its allies, some of whom have extended financial and political support to Iraq in the 22-month-old conflict.

Jordan Times

An independent Arab political daily published by Jordan Press Foundation

جريدة عن المؤسسة الصحفية الاردنية "الرأي"

Volume 7 Number 2017

AMMAN, MONDAY JULY 19, 1982 — RAMADAN 28, 1402

Price: Jordan 100 fils; Syria 1 pound; Lebanon 1 pound; Saudi Arabia 1.50 riyals; UAE 1.50 dirhams; Great Britain 25 pence

Egypt reports response to call for summit

ALEXANDRIA (R) — A limited number of Arab countries have replied to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's call for an Arab summit meeting to discuss Middle East developments. Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Sunday. Speaking to reporters after a meeting of Egypt's national security council, Mr. Ali said: "We have received replies from some Arab states such as Jordan and Sudan. We are still waiting for other replies." He did not say whether the countries replying so far had agreed to a summit. President Mubarak called last Thursday for a meeting of Arab leaders to formulate joint action on the Lebanese conflict, the Iraq-Iran war and the Somali-Ethiopian dispute.

PLO official calls for U.S. recognition

BONN (R) — The Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) representative in West Germany said Sunday that the United States would have to recognise the PLO if it wanted a successful Middle East policy. "If the U.S. wants to conduct clever policies—and not stupid policies like (former U.S. Secretary of State Alexander) Haig's—then it must recognise the PLO," Abdullah Frangi said in a radio interview. Mr. Frangi said the current conflict in the Lebanon would be followed by others if Arab countries failed to close ranks. "Today Lebanon, tomorrow another Arab country, if the Arabs cannot unite," he said. Mr. Frangi compared PLO activity in Lebanon to French resistance against Hitler. As long as the Palestinians' right to self-determination was ignored, he said, the PLO has no choice "but to draw the world's attention to itself by the most primitive and simple means."

EEC to hear Genscher's report

BRUSSELS (R) — European Community foreign ministers meet Monday to assess the impact on the Middle East of the Lebanon crisis and the war between Iran and Iraq. The ministers, at their last meeting before the summer holiday, will hear a report from West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher on his recent visits to Amman and Cairo.

Bomb explodes near Israeli exhibition

VENICE (R) — A bomb exploded in front of the Israeli pavilion at the Biennale Festival early Sunday causing light damage but no injuries, police said. The blast smashed the pavilion's door and damaged two paintings. The damage was not discovered until later as the sound of the explosion was probably covered by the noise of nearby fireworks, police said.

Swiss rail collision kills 6, injures 59

OTHMARISINGEN, Switzerland (R) — Six people were killed and 59 injured when a freight train tore into the side of an express travelling from West Germany to Italy near this Swiss village early Sunday. Several carriages of the Dortmund-Frankfurt-Rimini express were slit open by the northbound freight train, which ploughed into the express near a track switch 25 kilometres west of Zurich, local police said. The 544 passengers on the express, mostly West German tourists heading for the beaches of the Adriatic, were jolted from their sleep by the collision just after 3 a.m. (0200 GMT). Daylight brought a scene of devastation with six overturned carriages, torn and twisted metal and luggage everywhere in one of the most accidents in Switzerland in recent years. Police said the cause was not known. They said the crash was first thought to have been a head-on collision, but rail officials now suspected a fault in the automatic track switching mechanism which sent the freight train into the middle of the express.

Hussein receives Junblatt

His Majesty King Hussein Sunday receives Lebanese leader Walid Junblatt (Petra photo)

AMMAN (Petra) — His Majesty King Hussein received at the Royal Court on Sunday leader of the Lebanese National Movement Walid Junblatt.

During the meeting, they discussed the serious developments in Lebanon resulting from Israel's invasion of Lebanon and the siege of West Beirut.

King Hussein affirmed that the absence of "Arab solidarity and Arab disunity have created the appropriate atmosphere for Israel to implement its expansionist designs and to storm Lebanese territories." The King also praised the courageous and firm stand of the Lebanese and Palestinian people in the face of the Israeli invasion.

Sporadic clashes erupt in Beirut

BEIRUT (Agencies) — Sporadic shelling broke out around West Beirut Sunday, hours after Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Palestinian forces in the city has less than 30 days to leave.

Efforts to end the conflict went on as U.S. envoy Philip Habib met Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafiq Al Wazzan.

State-run Beirut Radio said Sunday's shooting was intermittent and confined to the southern suburbs where most of the 5,000 to 6,000 Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) fighters are concentrated.

A statement from the Palestinian news agency WAFA said it came from the Israeli side.

The area has been largely quiet since furious artillery battles last Sunday killed at least 60 people.

The PLO has offered no reaction to a speech by Mr. Begin in Tel Aviv Saturday night in which he told Israelis that the PLO forces had less than 30 days to withdraw from Beirut.

It was the first time Israel had fixed a time limit for protracted talks aimed at securing a peaceful end to the siege of the Lebanese capital.

Israel has threatened to launch an all-out attack on Beirut.

The PLO has agreed in principle to leave, but the American peace talks have founded over disagreements over where, when and how they should go.

Throughout the month-long siege, Mr. Habib has been the key link with Israel, while Mr. Wazzan has maintained constant contact with the PLO.

Government sources said they were still considering a PLO proposal that its fighters pull back temporarily to positions within Lebanon while final foreign delegations are arranged.

But hopes for a breakthrough in the talks are pinned on a meeting on Tuesday in Washington between President Reagan and the Syrian and Saudi Arabian foreign ministers, Abdul Halim Khaddam and Prince Saud Al Faisal.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam said Sunday his country was prepared to accept leaders of the PLO but that Syria maintained its refusal to accept PLO fighters.

Mr. Khaddam was speaking to reporters at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport where he made a stopover on his way to Washington for talks with President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz.

The Syrian minister recalled that most of the PLO leaders originally stayed in Damascus before they went to Beirut. If they asked, they would be allowed to return to the Syrian capital, he said.

Mr. Khaddam said moving the Palestinian forces to Syria was not in their own interest. The Palestinians realised the Syrian refusal to let them enter the country was for their own benefit, he said.

"It is in their own interest that they be moved from one country to another," the minister added, adding it would be the fourth time the Palestinians were sent to another country.

Syria earlier set the negotiations back by refusing to take the PLO fighters into its territory as had been proposed in the negotiations.

The government sources here said some negotiators were optimistic that Tuesday's meeting could produce some sort of political concessions for the PLO from the United States, which at present does not recognise the organisation.

In return, Arab countries might agree to take in the PLO fighters and so bring a peaceful solution to the critical Lebanese situation, the sources said.

Meanwhile, sources close to Prime Minister Wazzan said he would reject outright a proposal from Mr. Begin that Israel and Lebanon sign a peace treaty. Mr. Wazzan would not accept any peace plan that did not include the settling of the Palestinian question, they said.

The Israeli cabinet appeared to be split over the next steps to be taken in its demand for a PLO withdrawal from the Beirut, government officials said.

At Sunday's cabinet meeting many ministers accused the PLO, as well as Syria and Saudi Arabia, of stalling in the negotiations being conducted by Mr. Habib, one official said.

"Some ministers felt the cabinet should take an immediate decision on new measures to force out the Palestinian terrorists from Beirut," he told reporters.

But a majority of the cabinet agreed to wait until after President Reagan's meeting with the Syrian and Saudi foreign ministers in Washington on Tuesday," he said.

Israelis prepare to stay on; Sidon refugees return to camps, page 8

In spite of the tight Israeli siege of Beirut, fuel is being smuggled into the Lebanese capital. A

Lebanese driver fills his car Sunday using a water bottle as funnel (A.P. wirephoto)

Washington refuses comment on Israeli reply on use of cluster bombs in Lebanon

WASHINGTON (R) — The White House said Saturday it had received a reply from Israel on the use of American-made artillery cluster bombs against Palestinians in Lebanon.

But there was no word on whether the Israelis had admitted using the fragmentation weapons. Spokeswoman Kim Hoggard would not disclose the contents of the Israeli response, received on Friday.

"No such decision has been made by the president," he said.

The New York Times said a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) report found that Israel had used cluster bombs in populated areas, with loss of civilian lives.

Congressional sources have said that administration officials told Congress that Israel "might have" violated restrictions on arms sales, but it made no recommendation that further sales be suspended or cut off.

Israel, a major purchaser of advanced U.S. weapons, has repeatedly argued that even though the arms are used outside its borders the purpose remains "defensive."

Last year the Reagan administration held up shipments of F-16 fighters following the use of similar planes by Israel to bomb a nuclear power project in Iraq and Palestinian headquarters in Beirut.

Foreign countries are forbidden to use U.S.-supplied arms except for defensive purposes. Cluster bombs come under further restrictions, which have not been made public.

Another White House spokesman earlier denied a report in the New York Times that President Reagan was holding up shipments of additional cluster bombs to Israel pending a reply the Israeli government.

"One source said the report, by not taking a stand on whether a violation occurred, would force Congress to decide whether arms sales to Israel should end, at least temporarily.

Israel, a major purchaser of advanced U.S. weapons, has repeatedly argued that even though the arms are used outside its borders the purpose remains "defensive."

The U.S. had inquired whether Israel had employed cluster bombs—which explode and send lethal shards of metal in all directions—in its war against the Palestinians in Lebanon.

Foreign countries are forbidden to use U.S.-supplied arms except for defensive purposes. Cluster bombs come under further restrictions, which have not been made public.

The report made no mention of cluster bombs, the sources said, even though Congress had asked for a report on their use.

One source said the report, by not taking a stand on whether a violation occurred, would force Congress to decide whether arms sales to Israel should end, at least temporarily.

Israel, a major purchaser of advanced U.S. weapons, has repeatedly argued that even though the arms are used outside its borders the purpose remains "defensive."

Last year the Reagan administration held up shipments of F-16 fighters following the use of similar planes by Israel to bomb a nuclear power project in Iraq and Palestinian headquarters in Beirut.

Foreign countries are forbidden to use U.S.-supplied arms except for defensive purposes. Cluster bombs come under further restrictions, which have not been made public.

Another White House spokesman earlier denied a report in the New York Times that President Reagan was holding up shipments of additional cluster bombs to Israel pending a reply the Israeli government.

"One source said the report, by not taking a stand on whether a violation occurred, would force Congress to decide whether arms sales to Israel should end, at least temporarily.

Israel, a major purchaser of advanced U.S. weapons, has repeatedly argued that even though the arms are used outside its borders the purpose remains "defensive."

Last year the Reagan administration held up shipments of F-16 fighters following the use of similar planes by Israel to bomb a nuclear power project in Iraq and Palestinian headquarters in Beirut.

Foreign countries are forbidden to use U.S.-supplied arms except for defensive purposes. Cluster bombs come under further restric-

Heavy fighting continues in Gulf

BEIRUT (Agencies) — Iraq reported heavy fighting Sunday for the fifth day running as Iraqi troops battled to repel an Iranian invasion.

the Shatt Al Arab.

The high command communiqué said fierce battles continued all Saturday night and Sunday near the southern Iraqi city of Basra, apparent target of the Iranian offensive.

The statement did not make clear whether the fighting took place inside Iraq, but Saturday the high command said the Iranians had been lured into Iraqi territory as part of a plan to destroy them.

The Iraqi news agency (INA) said a senior Iraqi commander told the Baghdad newspaper Al Thawra that the Iranians threw two armoured and two mechanised divisions into the latest assault, which began on Friday night.

The commander said the Iranian invasion seemed aimed at winning control of the eastern bank of the Shatt Al Arab waterway and then encircling Basra.

Basra is an industrial city of half a million people, and Iraq's main southern oil fields lie to the west of the Shatt Al Arab.

The high command communiqué said a total of 3,479 Iranians were killed and 26 tanks destroyed when Iraqi ground forces forced a retreat in the Basra region. Iraqi helicopters had knocked out another two Iranian tanks.

The high command has so far given no information about Iraqi casualties in the five days of battle.

Meanwhile, Iran claimed further major war successes, indicating that last week's fighting close to their common border was still going on.

A military communiqué said that in the latest operation inside Iraq, Iranian troops had destroyed two Iraqi brigades and one battalion, killing or wounding more than 850 Iraqis.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, quoted the communiqué as saying Iranian forces had knocked out 116 Iraqi tanks and armoured troop carriers.

Western military experts consider the casualty and equipment loss figures issued by both sides in this continuation of the 22-month-old Gulf war to be inaccurate, but say they give some indication of the intensity of the fighting.

Iranian fighters and helicopters had raided targets inside Iraq, inflicting heavy damage and casualties, the communiqué said.

The communiqué did not say when or where the latest operation took place.

Tehran Radio also reported that the speaker of the Iranian parliament, Hoja Toleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani, had warned unnamed Gulf states against supplying arms to Iraq.

The radio broadcast the speaker's address to Sunday's session of the Majlis (parliament) in which he reiterated that Iran had no territorial ambitions against other countries.

But he added: "If the truckloads of arms continue to go to Iraq, then Iran will have the right to an appropriate response."

Referring to Western concern over the continuing war, Hoja Toleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani said current operations were no more than a continuation of previous activities against Iraq.

"The nature of our efforts is still defensive, just as in the past," he said.

Concern in U.S.

In Washington, a cutoff of oil from Iran and Iraq would have a great impact on supplies in the United States, Senator Henry Jackson said Sunday.

Mr. Jackson, a Democrat and a member of the Armed Services Committee, said the real threat was that Iran would advance beyond Iraq and halt oil shipments from other Gulf states.

"That would stop our economic recovery dead in its tracks," he said.

Mr. Jackson said the renewed fighting between Iran and Iraq had already pushed up the spot price of oil by at least $1 a barrel.

But he said the real danger lay in the possibility Iran might move into Kuwait and down through the Gulf, sabotaging the region's oil fields.

The United States, its European allies and Japan had to be able to move against the hard blow a Gulf oil cutoff would deal to Western economies, he said.

Israeli ammunition dump blows up

TIBERIAS, Israel (R) — An Israeli army ammunition dump blew up with a deafening roar Sunday, creating panic in parts of north Israel and setting off explosions that thundered across Galilee for three hours.

Local hospitals were put on emergency footing but police said that no one appeared to have been killed and only a few people injured.

They demanded that the United Nations Security Council establish a U.N. peace-keeping force in Lebanon immediately under U.N. control.

A communiqué issued after a three-day ministerial meeting of the 97-member Non-Aligned Movement criticised the United States for its aid to Israel.

It blamed U.S. support for Israel's "expansionist policy," a reference to Israel's invasion of Lebanon on June 6.

The meeting was called by Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) leader Yasser Arafat, who is entrenched in Beirut with about 6,000 Palestinian fighters.

The meeting set up a nine-strong committee to help solve the Lebanese situation, and called for comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against Israel.

MIDDLE EAST

Grasping the nettle: Israel, where to?

By Michael Adams

The following is the text of a speech delivered by the writer, who is editor-in-chief of Middle East International, to a Council for the Advancement of Arab-British Understanding (CAABU) meeting at the House of Commons on June 23, 1982.

It was 15 years ago this month, in the aftermath of an earlier round in the Arab-Israeli conflict, that I received a phone call summoning me to a meeting here in the House of Commons. And it was out of that meeting in June 1967 that CAABU was born.

Since then, as some of you know too well, I have often spoken at meetings like this one about the shortcomings of the press in its coverage of Middle East affairs.

And so it is some sort of comfort this evening, in the midst of so much that is deeply depressing, to be able to start by paying tribute to two or three honest and forthright voices that have been raised in the press during the dreadful events of the last fortnight in the Lebanon.

I should not like to think that I had missed the opportunity to say publicly how excellent have been both the leading articles and the reporting in The Times. I am not a great admirer of the colourful school of reporting represented by Robert Fisk, the Middle East correspondent of The Times: but in the dispatches he has sent from Beirut and Sidon, which have often been harrowing to read, Fisk has not merely shown the courage and persistence of a first class reporter in difficult and dangerous circumstances. Together with the indefatigable Christopher Walker in Jerusalem, he has also documented facts and events which the Israelis have tried to hide or distort and about which we might otherwise have remained unaware.

The Guardian too, although its reporting of the war and the carnage has been less vivid and comprehensive than that of The Times, has carried a series of leading articles which were admirable for their courage and their willingness to call a spade a spade. For instance on June 17th The Guardian condemned Israel's invasion of Lebanon as a "crime" and an "international horror." It asked how the "stranglehold of Israel's leaders on American policy-making" could be broken, and said that it was difficult for anyone to argue that Israel needed "protection against Arab terrorists when the state of Israel itself sets an example of terrorism on a nationwide scale."

As I knew to my cost, it was not permissible in the quite recent past to speak about Israel in these terms in The Guardian or anywhere else in the British press. And the change has come about only partly because Israel's actions in Lebanon this month have been so evidently cruel and unjustifiable. Those who have lived at close quarters with this Arab-Israeli problem, as many of us here have done, know that the Israelis were guilty of similar barbarities in 1967—for instance in the extensive use of napalm and in the way they stripped the boots from the Egyptian soldiers and then drove them, in midsummer, out into the Sinai desert to die. Indeed, cruelty of this kind has characterised the Zionist enterprise from the outset. It runs like a scarlet thread through the whole story of its development, from Deir Yassin and the King David Hotel in the 1940's, through Qibya and Kafir Kassim in the 1950's, to the steadily escalating violence and repression throughout the occupied territories all through the 1970's and the murderous air raids on the Lebanon—culminating in this onslaught by land, sea and air which has left much of that unhappy country looking as a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph reported last week, like the end of the world.

Synopsis for death

In fact all along its borders and as far afield as Baghdad and the outskirts of Cairo, Israel has become synonymous to the Arabs for death and devastation. Iraq's nuclear installation; the Egyptian cities of the Suez Canal; Kuneitra on the Syrian Golan plateau; Jordanian villages on the East Bank of the Jordan River: they have all felt at one time or another the weight of Israel's baleful presence. Underlying it always is the savage spirit of the Old Testament, but brought up to date and computerised and armed with the F-16 and the cluster bomb.

No, the story of what is happening in the Lebanon is not a new one. The immediate context changes, but the overall intention of Zionism remains the same. That is why my heart sank when I read, at the start of Israel's invasion of the Lebanon, that the Israeli ambassador in Washington had said—and he was echoed in last Monday's Panorama programme on BBC television, and later that same evening by Mr. Begin himself on Newsnight—that Israel "does not covet one single square inch of Lebanese soil." For I remembered very well how on the first day of the June war, the then Prime Minister of Israel, Levi Eshkol, had said that Israel had no intention of annexing "even one foot of Arab territory." Today, 15 years later, Israel has annexed Arab Jerusalem and the Golan Heights and it has expropriated so much of the West Bank that its annexation one of these days will be little more than the confirmation of an already existing state of affairs. And so it will be, no doubt, with the Lebanon. The tide of destruction which has taken the heart out of all the once flourishing Arab cities along the coast of Palestine, from Gaza in the south through Ashkelon and Jaffa and Acre, has now spread northwards through Tyre and Sidon and Damour and has enveloped much of Beirut itself. And he would be a bold man who would prophesy when and how that tide would be turned back.

But the destruction of Arab towns and villages—almost 400 villages in Palestine alone and who knows how many now in the Lebanon—is not what matters most, although it represents a sad loss culturally and historically. What matters more, and what raises a terrible question mark over the whole Zionist enterprise, is what Israel has done and is doing to the Arab peoples around its borders, and especially to the Palestinian people, whom the Israelis set out more than half a century ago to dispossess. And here the invasion of the Lebanon this month throws a lurid and sinister light on Israel's methods as well as its underlying intention.

The casualty figures from the Lebanon cannot yet be precisely determined, partly because the destruction is on such a terrible scale and partly because the Israelis are doing their best to prevent any independent witnesses, including especially the officials and relief workers of the United Nations and its agencies from going to see for themselves the extent of the carnage. Preliminary estimates published by the Lebanese government and the International Red Cross put the dead at about 10-15,000: the injured at about twice that number; and the homeless at more than half a million. All this, by the way, in an attack which was made (as everyone now agrees) on a transparently specious pretext, the attempt on the life of the Israeli ambassador in London, but which (as the British foreign secretary roundly declared on television) had clearly been planned in meticulous detail for months before the attempt took place. Nor did the Israelis altogether succeed in persuading the BBC to accept the story with out examining the evidence—that the invasion was in response to what they called persistent bombardments by the PLO of Israeli settlements in Northern Galilee. For in two successive leading articles on the 10th and 14th June The Times stated the vital truth that the PLO had observed the ceasefire on Israel's northern border from the day it was agreed in July of 1981 until the day when Israel launched its bombers against Beirut in an unprovoked air attack on May 9th in which 12 people were killed. Until the Israelis broke it, the ceasefire had endured for 10 months and during that time no Israeli in the northern settlements had been injured, let alone killed, at the hands of the PLO.

You may feel that I am devoting a disproportionate amount of time to these details in the light of the terrible events of the last 18 days in the Lebanon. But it is important to establish the facts, and it is not always easy—especially when powerful agencies are at work trying to manipulate and misrepresent them. You may have seen a half page advertisement in The Times and The Guardian on June 21 paid for by the Zionist Federation of Great Britain, which repeated the lie about the invasion being aimed at "liberating Israel's civilian population from continuous acts of terror and aggression", and went on to state, with what in other circumstances one might have taken for a macabre sense of humour, that in the whole operation "the Israel defence forces took maximum precautions to ensure that the civilian population would not be harmed." I doubt whether the Zionist federation, before putting its name to this rubbish, asked the citizens of Tyre and Sidon—those of them who are still alive—that they thought of those precautions and of the humanity and restraint with which the Israelis had destroyed their cities.

Price of Zionism

I said that a terrible question mark hung over the whole Zionist enterprise, all the more so in the light of what has just happened in the Lebanon. I ought to explain more clearly what I mean. Briefly, it is this. What was wrong about Zionism from the start—political Zionism, that is—was that the plans of the Zionist pioneers could only be achieved at the expense of the Palestinian Arabs. It is important to be clear about this and, however obvious it may seem to us who are familiar with the history of this question, it is still not obvious, or not universally accepted as the fact, by public opinion at large in the West. That is why has proved so difficult to persuade Dayan resigned in disgust over his extremist policies. As for Sharon, who has more blood on his hands even than any of his colleagues, it was Dayan himself—who would call him a "wet"—who found it necessary to discipline Sharon for the brutality with which he suppressed the resistance movement in Gaza ten years ago. What would you expect from a government in which the principal parts are played by three men such as these?

Not only the PLO

Here I come to the point to what I have to say and I am sorry if it has taken me a long time to reach it. But I believe it is important to establish the groundwork of my argument clearly. In the Lebanon since June 5, I do not believe that the Israeli forces have merely been trying to eliminate the PLO as a military organisation. Nobody in his senses believes that the PLO has at any time presented a serious military threat to the existence and the survival of the Jewish state. How could it, with a few thousand guerrillas and no air force at all. How could it conceivably be a match for the strongest and best equipped army in the Middle East backed by what is generally thought to be the most powerful air force in the world after those of the two superpowers?

Of course the Israelis would like to put the PLO out of business: but I do not believe that this was the primary objective of the massive operation which has not yet been concluded in Lebanon. The scale of the operation and the number of casualties which the Israelis were prepared to take were so disproportionate to such an objective that there would be no logic in paying such a price for so small a prize. What then was the ultimate objective for which the Israelis were prepared to sacrifice so much blood—their own included—and to risk such a tremendous capital of international sympathy and support? Let me give you the answer provided a few days ago by a leading Zionist, the man, I suppose, with the best claim to be called the leading Zionist in the world, the former President of the World Zionist Federation, Dr. Nahum Goldman. In the course of an interview published in The Guardian last Friday (June 18, 1982), Dr. Goldman told the paper's Paris correspondent that he thought the Israeli action "out of all proportion to the threat faced on the northern border." And he went on to say, in what was obviously a carefully considered judgement: "the apparent aim is to liquidate the Palestinian people—which you cannot do to four million people."

Now you can believe Nahum Goldman or not, but you can hardly disregard the judgement of a man who knows more than any one in this country and perhaps in the whole world about the origins and the history of the Zionist movement, about Israel's predicament and the methods used by successive Israeli governments to deal with it. Dr. Goldman has known them all, from David Ben Gurion and Moshe Sharett to Golda Meir and Moshe Dayan and on through the decline of the Labour Party under Peres and Rabin, until you reach that critical point in the story five years ago when the Israelis put their trust in Menachem Begin. Long before there was a state of Israel and throughout the 34 years of the state's existence, Dr. Goldman has been active and involved in Israel's affairs. I don't know whether he regrets his own part in the shaping of Israel's destiny. I do know that in recent years he has been instrumental in echoing letter—and all credit to him—from Mr. Benedict Birnberg next day and a couple of similar letters in The Guardian. But the Jewish community as a whole, with its leaders in every walk of British life, and still more the large and enormously influential Jewish community in America—a community twice the size of the Jewish population of Israel—seem unable to let make no secret of his deepening concern over the direction that destiny has taken. But I have never heard from him or from any other spokesman, Jew or Gentile, who could speak with authority about Israeli attitudes and policies, so chilling a verdict as this one that he pronounced last week on the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

"The apparent aim is to liquidate the Palestinian people." For a Jew and a friend of Israel that must have been a dreadful thought to frame and to put into words for The Guardian correspondent, who as it happens was also a Jew, to pass on to a non-Jewish audience. But I believe it was a true verdict and that the Israeli intention in the Lebanon was not to minimise the enemy casualties but on the contrary to make them as heavy as possible, as part of a conscious and deliberate policy to liquidate the Palestinian people.

The fact that so many of those killed and wounded and the majority of those made homeless were Lebanese and not Palestinians is neither here nor there. The aim, I believe, was to intimidate, to terrify, to persuade Palestinians and Lebanese alike and the whole of the Arab World, that so terrible is the vengeance of Israel that anything is better than to stand in the way of it. How else can one explain the fact that the casualties on the two sides were in the ratio of approximately 50 Arabs to one Israeli or that one person in three of the population of the southern half of the Lebanon was either killed or wounded or made homeless.

Scale of the crime

The Israeli authorities dispute these figures and it is not possible as yet to be precise about the scale of the crime. But a crime it is and even if the figures prove in the end to be only half as great as those that have been put forward by the Red Cross and the Lebanese government, they will be on a scale that justifies the use of the word "massacre". If anyone doubts that, he need only consider for a moment what would have been the world's reaction if attacks of this magnitude had been launched by an Arab government against Israel—or indeed by any government anywhere in the world against its neighbours.

And that raises two questions which deserve attention, here and elsewhere in this free society of ours in the West. The first has already been posed with courage and clarity in a letter to The Times from Mrs. Marion Woolson published on June 16. Mrs. Woolson reminded us that many Germans had claimed after World War II that they had not known what the Nazis were doing to the Jews, and said that British Jews would not be able to make this excuse if they were asked about what has been happening in the Lebanon or about the killing of young Palestinian demonstrators by Israeli soldiers and settlers in the West Bank. And she asked: "Is there not even one prominent Jew in Britain who has the compassion, wisdom and courage to state publicly that he, or she, condemns all terrorism, whether perpetrated by states or individuals?"

So far the response has been minimal: an echoing letter—and all credit to him—from Mr. Benedict Birnberg next day and a couple of similar letters in The Guardian. But the Jewish community as a whole, with its leaders in every walk of British life, and still more the large and enormously influential Jewish community in America—a community twice the size of the Jewish population of Israel—seem unable to let name, has provoked inside Israel a reaction that has never been seen there before. For the first time while a war was actually going on Israelis have protested publicly about what was being done in their name. In the press and among academics and intellectuals there is a current of opinion which is sensitive to the criticisms from abroad and responsive to the moral and humanitarian arguments raised by the terrible bloodshed in the Lebanon. Those who are raising their voices are becoming aware of something that has been plain to Israel's critics outside for a long time: the fact that a society which places its future in the hands of men like Begin and Shamir whose ambition is not just to dominate and dispossess the Palestinians but to break their spirit altogether and in Nahum Goldman's suggestive phrase, "to liquidate the Palestinian people."

We shall do everything in our power to stop the repression, and to bring to the attention of the vast majority of decent and well-meaning Israelis what is being done in their name.

We call upon you, even during these harsh days, not to lose faith in Israeli-Palestinian coexistence, not to let the torch of peace and brotherhood be extinguished. Long after the evil deeds and their perpetrators will be forgotten, the states of Palestine and Israel will live side by side in peace and friendship.

For the moment I am afraid we can only regard that as a very optimistic forecast: but it is what we ought to be working for with all our might. In this endeavour, the Jews in Israel who prepared that message and who are genuinely prepared to respect the rights of the Arabs of Palestine and to coexist with them—they are our natural allies. We must help them and strengthen them, in the hope that one day they can prevail over the chauvinists in Israel, the men like Begin and Shamir whose ambition it is, not just to dominate and dispossess the Palestinians but to break their spirit altogether and in Nahum Goldman's suggestive phrase, "to liquidate the Palestinian people."

It is our job to frustrate such villainy and to work with individuals and through governments everywhere to see that the Palestinians survive and are able to recover the rights of which they have been so unjustly deprived.

David Hirst reports from the Palestinian positions on the men who want to carry on the fight against-Israel to the bitter end

It is easier to flatten Beirut than the PLO

"JUST think of it as 600 feet," said Yousef. "It sounds safer than 200 yards." That is the distance, more or less, that separates front-line Israeli and Palestinian positions at Tahlitwa on Beirut's international airport.

Yousef is one of thousands of volunteers, who have come in from the Palestinian diaspora—from Europe and America, as well as the Middle East. Most are in the Beqaa Valley. Yousef is from Phoenix, Arizona. He had been there three years—and acquired a wife, child, U.S. passport, and a comfortable job as a flight instructor at a private airport.

He received military training from Fatah before he left. He felt he had to return for what seemed to him to be Palestine's greatest hour of need. He telephones his wife every day. She was more worried than he was.

Yousef was on his first visit to this part of the front. He liked what he saw, morale was so obviously high. It was Abu Iyad, Arafat's No. 2, who assigned Yousef to take us. He wanted us to discover for ourselves what he had been telling us the night before: it was the men, rather than the leaders, who were determined to fight to the end. Abu Iyad did not disguise his own unhappiness at the thought of eventual withdrawal from Beirut. "I speak to my family every day in Kuwait. My youngest daughter tells me I must never raise the white flag. And personally I am not going to leave."

Only the leadership, he explained, had so far agreed in principle to leave—and, "as you know, I am not a member of the PLO executive committee."

Tahlitwa is two miles south of the PLO headquarters. You get here through the refugee camp of Bourj Al-Brajneh, and adjoining Shite suburbs. Like much of Beirut's only living slum land, it is a bewildering labyrinth—half urban, half rural—to anyone but the people who actually live there. It would be a death trap for Israeli infantry unless Israeli artillery and aircraft had flattened it first. It is under regular bombardment. But it is far from flattened yet. The big apartment blocks, an integral part of the 35-year-old camp, give way to smaller, less densely-packed structures, and eventually to flimsy, primitive, one-storey squatters' homes on the fringes of the airport runway. He removes his gas mask first. "They are scared," he explains, "and ready to use gas or anything."

Unlike in the city proper, the Palestinians have built no artificial kyrads, vegetable patches and hen runs. A Shi'ite family still clings to its home, terribly vulnerable, if yet invisible behind the trees, to the Israelis. We express amazement at what seems suicidal folly. The Palestinians call it admirable "steadfastness," and one of them puts a Kalashnikov on to a woman's hands while the man of the household makes a rousing but somewhat phoney pro-Palestinian speech. A PLO photographer records the scene. A chained alsatian barks uncontrollably—almost comical enough to alert the enemy. Someone doesn't like my white shirt. Too conspicuous here. He lends me his black jacket.

He removes his gas mask first. "They are scared," he explains, "and ready to use gas or anything." Unlike in the city proper, the Palestinians have built no artificial kyrads, vegetable patches and hen runs. A Shi'ite family still clings to its home, terribly vulnerable, if yet invisible behind the trees, to the Israelis. We express amazement at what seems suicidal folly. The Palestinians call it admirable "steadfastness," and one of them puts a Kalashnikov on to a woman's hands while the man of the household makes a rousing but somewhat phoney pro-Palestinian speech. A PLO photographer records the scene. A chained alsatian barks uncontrollably—almost comical enough to alert the enemy. Someone doesn't like my white shirt. Too conspicuous here. He lends me his black jacket.

He removes his gas mask first. "They are scared," he explains, "and ready to use gas or anything." Unlike in the city proper, the

who have mobility: they who sit in their tanks with electronically-controlled machine guns. They have become cowards, really. And they lie about their casualties."

Heavy artillery is passing overhead. It is crashing somewhere in the urban jungle we have passed through. It is another illustration of Abu Khaled's point. It causes him very little concern. "They have no idea where we are. If they hit us, it is by accident. We have lost two or three men from artillery round here since they arrived."

It is becoming clear that, unless the Israelis decide to storm the city soon, they are going to fall into the same futile tactics which the Syrians used against both Palestinians and Christians before them—stationary wars of attrition, endless artillery duels, which slaughter civilians but achieve no military objective. Sooner or later, perhaps, the besieged Palestinians might run out of ammunition.

Abu Khaled and his men have no illusions, like anybody else, about Israel's ability to defeat them by destroying Beirut. But, for them, their resistance has already sent shock waves through Israeli society. They are ardent radio listeners, Voice of Palestine first, Israel Radio, and then the rest. "What does it mean when Begin criticises Sharon, when one hundred thousand people demonstrate against the war in Tel-Aviv? They are besieging Beirut militarily, but we are besieging Jerusalem politically."

We put the delicate question. Will you withdraw if Arafat says so. There seems to be a rehearsed reply to that one. "Only to Palestine."

—the Guardian

Randa Habib's CORNER

Children are even more intelligent than we tend to believe. More often (wrongly) classified as "little men" children are individuals who have their own logic.

In this topic that some ladies and myself were discussing the other day.

One of the ladies present, a teacher in kindergarten explained to us that of patience and psychology were needed to look after them "little men".

"One day, she said, a child was constantly crying asking for his mother. As this was affecting the whole atmosphere in the kindergarten class. The teacher, fed up, told him: "At home you have your mother but here in school I am your mother." Then, addressing the whole class, she asked: "Who is your mother here?" The children in one voice answered "You".

A few minutes later the same sobbing boy was screaming "I want Daddy".

But this is not all. This teacher who teaches a primary class well, asked them one day to outline what they want to do when they grow up. One hour later, the children gave in their papers: she presented a boat for the boy who wanted to be a sailor or a captain, an aeroplane for the future pilot and a syringe for the doctor etc... Only one child handed back a blank copy.

The teacher then asked: "Why, kid, don't you know what you want to do later?" "No, Miss, I know," answered the kid. "But I don't know how to draw it" "And what is it you want to do?" The teacher asked.

"I want to get married," the pupil answered. Undoubtedly children are smarter than we think...

Utah educators aim to develop more accurate image of Arabs

By A.B. Kassay
Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — When one thinks of a place with which to compare Jordan, the state of Utah in the U.S. is not a place that immediately springs to mind, although it should. Both consist largely of desert, with a large salt water lake (the Dead Sea and Salt Lake); both lakes have a fresh water river flowing into them; both rivers are called the River Jordan; both places have a Mount Nebo; and if this is not enough, Wadi Rum in the south of Jordan is highly similar to the south of Utah and the same minerals and ores can be found in both places.

So feeling pretty much at home as far as the geography is concerned, a group of Utah educators started their research on various aspects of Jordanian life.

The team, which arrived in Jordan on June 11 for a six-week intensive study programme ending today, Monday, includes lecturers from elementary, secondary and higher education levels with a media specialist, a representative from Dixie College, a consultant from the State Education Agency, and educators from administrative ranks, all in all giving a representative cross-section of educators in the state.

The visit, which is sponsored by the University of Utah's Middle East Centre, the Graduate School of Education, the Utah State Office of Education, and Dixie College, has had the purpose of preparing studies on Jordanian art and how it reflects the culture, Islamic influence on the life of the young, the geography of Jordan, children of Jordan (their dress, holidays and responsibilities), Jordanian women in leadership, social relationships, educational organisations, the nature and characteristics of Jordanian people, and education for the handicapped.

These studies were done in the hope of "developing cadre teachers who can communicate to their students the truth about Arabs and the Arab way of life, and to correct the misconceptions and stereotypes that prevail in America about Arabs," explained project director Harry Bluhm, associate professor of educational psychology at the University of Utah. Team members agreed that accurate information about the Middle Eastern way of life is scarce, consequently contributing to the promotion of the disagreeable Arab stereotypes in the West.

The 15-member team of Utah educators during their study visit to Jordan.

"Arabs who go to the West do not help correct this image," says Anne Butler, a teacher in the Elementary Laboratory School at Utah State University, "because they either cluster together and keep to themselves or else they are so widely dispersed that they lose touch with their Arab identity. They do not help Americans understand their culture and mode of living."

Ara Evans, associate professor of economics at Dixie College, was impressed by the level of urbanisation which Jordan has achieved. Having come here expecting a 19th century set-up, he saw very few camels and tents but many Mercedes and modern skyscrapers with only 20 per cent of the population or even less wearing the traditional Arab dress. "But through his study of social relationship (family, marriage, extended family, sex, money, courtship, divorce...) he could see that parts of the rural set-up, mainly manifested by the segregation between men and women in education for instance, and the big role which the family plays in forming the decision to marry and select respective partners. "It is difficult to accept the segregation of the sexes, being used to a co-ed system," says Professor Evans. "But when all is said and done the divorce rate in Jordan remains considerably lower than in the West".

Dr. Geraldine Clark, representative of the Utah State Board of Education who is conducting a joint study with Prof. Bluhm on the education of the handicapped, stated that Jordan is

CORRECTION

The Jordan Times apologises for a typing error which appeared in the article: Jordan's first weekly magazine may well be a platform for positive change (Jordan Times, Saturday July 17, 1982), 4th column. The correct sentence should be: Both Mr. Tell and Mr. Masarwah also feel that investment for the sake of profitability alone should not be the main moving force behind economic planning and development in Jordan. The sentence was printed without the word not.

Ministry to take part in course

AMMAN (Petra) — The Agriculture Ministry will participate in a training course on laboratories in Britain on July 29.

Head of the soil laboratory section at the agricultural research and guidance directorate Samir Al Salti will represent the ministry in the four-week course.

Government suspends public transport director

By Riyad Ahmad
Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — The Council of Ministers has decided to suspend Public Transport Corporation Director Ibrahim Mahadin, and to refer him to a government disciplinary council.

Mr. Mahadin had been reinstated in his post on June 16, 1982 after Jordan's Court of Cassation had rescinded a government decision to dismiss Mr. Mahadin.

The government decision was due to in fractions of governmental regulations related to debating government interdepartmental issues in public.

The case started when Mr. Mahadin criticised a government decision to increase the Public Transport Corporation's fleet of buses to a number exceeding what he described as its capacity limits.

On July 12, 1982 the Council of Ministers decided to refer Mr. Mahadin to a government disciplinary council consisting of different members for the second time.

Mr. Mahadin, who is awaiting the final decision by the disciplinary council expected the government to stick to this decision.

Awqaf minister announces instructions for pilgrimage

AMMAN (Petra) — Minister of Awqaf and Islamic Affairs Kamel Al Sharif announced the 1402 Hijra pilgrimage instructions in a press conference on Sunday. Mr. Sharif said that the ministry drew up these instructions stemming from its duty to serve the Muslim pilgrims, to organise transportation and to define the duties of the pilgrims and the duties of the people responsible for pilgrims' transport.

He added that the instructions include information about what the pilgrim's transportation costs for different means of transportation, and the instructions of the Saudi ministry of Awqaf to pilgrims. He added that pilgrims and people entrusted with transportation should submit complete applications to the ministry before Aug. 29.

He explained that the same instructions will apply to West Bank and Gaza citizens while those who will come from the Palestinian territories occupied in 1948 will be flown to Saudi Arabia.

Awqaf Minister Kamel Al Sharif

Red Crescent president back from Geneva meeting

AMMAN (Petra) — National Society of the Jordanian Red Crescent President Ahmad Abu Qourah returned to Amman on Sunday after participating in the meetings of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the permanent committee of the ICRC, and the League of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies held in Geneva last Wednesday to discuss relief operations to Lebanon.

Dr. Abu Qourah said participants discussed the general situation in Lebanon and the question of giving aid to Lebanese and Palestinian victims in Lebanon. He added that the president of the ICRC discussed during the meeting the activities of the ICRC and its humanitarian role in relief operations and helping Lebanese and Palestinian victims. He said that he had asked the ICRC to continue its aid, including medicine and relief materials, to the victims in Lebanon.

Dr. Abu Qourah said that participants also discussed the question of the Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners, who should be regarded as war prisoners according to the Geneva agreements, despite the refusal by the Zionist occupation authorities to consider them so.

Dr. Abu Qourah added that the ICRC is continuing its demands to apply international law and to regard Palestinian fighters as war prisoners. He explained that the participants discussed the points of weakness in the provisions of international law on these topics so that they could be discussed in the next Red Cross and Red Crescent conferences.

Industrial injuries rise in 1981

By Omar Abiadah
Petra

cost of each case of work injury is some JD 56 while the indirect cost is about JD 507.

The source attributed the increase in the injuries to the application of the social security law on the enterprises, which requires these enterprises to supply the Social Security Corporation (SSC) with lists of each work injury, because the SSC is responsible for treating the injured worker while earlier, there was no control on the enterprises because the employers used to cover the treatment expenses.

A quick look at the phenomenon of work injuries in the last four years shows that they have been constantly increasing. There were 3,073 cases of work injury in 1977, 3,238 cases in 1978, 3,349 cases in 1979, and 3,689 cases in 1980. The source said the direct source also attributed the increase in the work injuries to the increasing number of the various industrial enterprises, the increase of the number of workers, particularly non-Jordanians, the shortage in the legislation of public safety and vocational health, and the shortage of the technical cadres specialised in matters related to vocational safety and health in the enterprises and appointing a safety supervisor for each committee.

Lailat Al Qadr marked Saturday night

AMMAN (J.T.) Lailat Al Qadr (night of determination), which usually falls in the last ten days of the fasting month, Ramadan, is a very special night to Muslims. It is a night when Muslims stay awake worshipping God, and reading the Koran. According to Muslim theologians Lailat Al Qadr is observed on the night of Ramadan 26-27.

Jordanians affirm solidarity with Iraq on National Day

AMMAN (Petra) — On the anniversary of Iraq's national day, a delegation of the Jordanian popular committee for the support of the Iraqi people headed by Dr. Rifai Odeh visited the Iraqi embassy in Amman on Sunday and met with Iraqi Ambassador Ibrahim Shuja' Sultan. The delegation affirmed the "solidarity of the Jordanian people with the Iraqi people and leadership in the battle they are waging against the Iranian aggression."

The committee also sent a cable to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on this anniversary saying that "the Iraqi Arab people are scoring the most glorious victories and offering the most precious sacrifices to protect the sacred homeland and to repulse the invaders, whose aggression coincided with that of their Zionist allies against the Lebanese and Palestinian people in Lebanon and who are plotting with Zionism and certain Arabs working against the Arab Nation".

The angels, who are pure and sexless beings created by God before he made the world, are employed as God's messenger according to the Muslim faith.

Therefore, on this night they descend upon God's command to witness religious people's worship and to intercede for them before God, "who shall reward the faithful."

At the Garden of Eden where they shall dwell Lailat Al Qadr, God says: "Peace it is, till the rising of dawn" the Imam concluded.

Local firms win contracts to pave roads in Aqaba

AQABA (Petra) — The committee for the organisation of the city of Aqaba signed three agreements with a number of local firms to open and pave streets in the third and fifth residential areas and in limited income areas. It also granted a tender for the building of two commercial markets in the limited income and first residential areas.

The cost of the tenders, one of the biggest projects undertaken by the committee in the city of Aqaba, is some JD 3 million, and some 589,000 metres of streets will be opened and paved in these residential areas.

The committee's chief engineer,

PHILIPS VIDEO PAC

Excitement, fun and entertainment. Link your TV set to a Philips Videopac and you enter a new world of active video entertainment! You can already choose from no less than 38 different Videopac cartridges with unlimited possibilities. Many cartridges even hold several game variations or skill levels to give you still more choice. The Philips Videopac computer comes with a 49-character keyboard that puts you in direct contact with its powerful computer brain. This real computer power, together with Videopac's unmatched selection of video games and functions, gives you top excitement. And that's why the Philips Videopac is so much more than just an ordinary video game!

Now available

1 • Race 2 • Spin-out 3 • Cryptogram 4 • Pairs & Logic 5 • Space Rendevous 6 • American Football 7 • Air-Sea War 8 • Battle 9 • Blackjack 10 • Ten pin Bowling 11 • Basketball 12 • Echo 13 • Baseball 14 • Computer Programmer 15 • Golf 16 • Cosmic Conflict 17 • Take the Money and Run 18 • Playhouse 19 • Matrix 20 • Gunfights 21 • Samurai 22 • Death Chopper 23 • Space Invaders 24 • Space Invaders 25 • Space Invaders 26 • Laser Game 27 • Electronic Table Football 28 • Electronic Pinball 29 • Super Pinball 30 • Super Pinball 31 • The Musician 32 • Labyrinth Game 33 • Super Pinball 34 • Jumping Acrobats 35 • Satellite Attack 36 • Electronic Billiards 37 • Electronic Soccer 38 • Electronic Ice Hockey 39 • Monkeys 40 • Munchkin

* New cartridges are being added regularly!

Try the Philips Videopac yourself at:
TRANSJORDAN ENGINEERING COMPANY
PHILIPS Showrooms
Jabal Amman - Jabal Hussein
Downtown Amman
PHILIPS We want you to have the best

 Lufthansa

3 times via Damascus (tuesday, thursday, sunday)

2 times via Larnaca (wednesday, saturday) from Frankfurt, immediate and quick connections are available to major cities in Germany, Europe, north, central and south America.

For further information contact your nearest IATA travel or cargo agent, or call:

Lufthansa, Intercontinental Hotel,
Jabal Amman, Tel.: 41305, 44236, 44377

Labour office seeks economic statistics

AMMAN (Petra) — The Arab labour office has asked the Labour Ministry to supply it with information and statistics on the record figures of the cost of living, the family budget, and regulations related to the bases of determining the cost of living allowance as well as the regulations governing the fixing of the price of the local currency for foreign currencies in Jordan.

Tawjih results announced today

AMMAN (Petra) — Minister of Education Sa'id Al Tal is due to hold a press conference on Monday, July 19, to announce the results of the second secondary general certificate (Tawjih) for the year 1982.

PETRA PHOTO

Idris opens police force mosque

AMMAN (Petra) — Public Security Director Lt.-Gen. Mohammad Idris opened on Sunday the Public Security Department Mosque. Awqaf and Islamic Affairs Ministry Under-Secretary Abdul Salam Al 'Abdadi and the Armed Forces Mufti Nooh Al Goudah spoke in the opening ceremony emphasising the role of mosques in preparing faithful Muslim generations knowing their rights and duties. Lt.-Gen. Idris handed over awards to the winners in a religious context.

By T.A. Jaber

DE FACTONOMICS

Israel's wishful thinking makes peace more remote

EVERY NATION has its own hopes, expectations and dreams. They vary from achieving economic prosperity to internal stability, social cohesion, military strength, regional influence and the attainment of what is believed to be a national right.

The Arab Nation has its own overall hopes and objectives of political unity, economic progress and freedom. The defence of its own lands in what is geographically known as the Arab World against domination and Israeli occupation seems to take priority over the previous objectives. However, there are dogmatic people, whose influence has declined, who believe that the achievement of the last goal depends and requires the attainment of Arab unity, progress and freedom.

In the light of the Zionist success in its occupation of Palestine and other Arab areas and its increasing technological and other domination in the region, most of our hopes have been frustrated and transformed into wishful thinking.

For an Arab citizen, while Israel occupies more and more of Arab lands and dominates more Arab people, we are struggling to get United Nations resolutions passed. While Israel develops its institutional framework, politically and economically, on permanent grounds, the Arab countries continue to experiment with varying degrees of success. While the Israeli society can be mobilised cohesively to attack, we are caught in the midst of international polarisation, social instability and sub-regional conflicts.

These developments have created over time plenty of illusions on both the Arab and Israeli sides. Among the Arabs, a sense of defeat and frustration is crawling into their spirits. On the other hand, the Israelis are becoming over-confident and too aggressive. The end result is a state of affairs where a fair peaceful settlement would be remote unless changes in attitudes and mentality occur. Since the Arabs have been so far only reacting to Israeli deeds, the stability of our region depends to a greater extent on Israeli behaviour and policies.

The Israeli brutal invasion of Lebanon demonstrates to what extent the Israeli Zionists have become overconfident and, accordingly, the Israeli questions related to the future of Lebanon and the widespread killing of its inhabitants will not be a cure to Israeli complex problems. It is the other way round. Israeli problems of galloping inflation, unemployment, substantial foreign debts, restricted consumption and even instability will worsen.

Israeli invasion of Lebanon used the pretext of safeguarding its northern settlements to abort such attempt.

The Begin government would not accept to consider the future of Palestinians. To a Zionist, this would represent a reversal process and a countdown to the mobilisation and brainwashing that is always needed to guarantee the viability of Israel. Invading Lebanon has therefore become a means towards crushing the PLO as an institution and to divert attention from dealing with the Palestinian question.

This is not the only example of Israeli wishful thinking. A second example relates to the Israeli management of its own resources. Regional domination requires much more human, financial and other resources than Israel can possess. Even with the financial and other support provided by the world Jewish community and the United States, Israel has to think hard of the excessive cost of domination. Occupation of Lebanon and the widespread killing of its inhabitants will not be a cure to Israeli complex problems. It is the other way round. Israeli problems of galloping inflation, unemployment, substantial foreign debts, restricted consumption and even instability will worsen.

A third example of Israeli wishful thinking relates to one of its stated aims of invading Lebanon, namely, to help establish a strong central government. For those who know the Lebanese political structure, this Israeli objective is seriously questioned in terms of both its sincerity and attainability. Why should Israel have this innocent goal which the Lebanese factions are facing serious problems to achieve? Is it meant to be another pretext to impose one faction in Lebanon on the others? Would Israel intervene and devastate Lebanon again and again if a strong government failed?

Now more than any other time, the Israelis have to bring to reality and help get rid of their wild dreams. This opportunity should be seized and handled to the benefit of the whole region.

For just one port?

SO, Mr. Begin wants to form a confederation with Jordan? How interesting. He says that in return he would provide Jordan with a free port on the Mediterranean. On that specific mercantile point, we say that we don't need a port on the Mediterranean, seeing as how Aqaba port is doing fine, so we can throw out the idea of forming a confederation in return for a free port. Mr. Begin will have to do better than that. Maybe he can offer us an airport and a highway, along with a port? How about a hotel? Or a seaside resort?

Mr. Begin, sadly, is serious in his proposal, and he seriously expects Jordan to sell its principles and dignity and self-respect and commitment to the Palestinian people's rights, in return for a port. Our reply is: Thanks, but no thanks.

If Mr. Begin wants to make peaceful overtures to Jordan, he should remember that the path to friendship with Jordan passes through the route of honourably resolving the Palestinian issue. If Mr. Begin wants confederation with us, let him first withdraw from the occupied territories and allow the people of Palestine to determine for themselves their political future, in freedom and in dignity. Let the Palestinians have a state of their own, and then, perhaps, Israel, Palestine and Jordan can all form a tripartite confederation. Why not? Everything is possible when people of good will deal with each other on equal terms. But Mr. Begin is dreaming if he thinks Jordan will make unilateral peace with Israel when Israel is conducting a genocidal war against the Palestinians and occupies large chunks of Lebanese and Syrian territory.

Mr. Begin might sell his soul for a port on the Mediterranean. Jordan will not. It is a sad irony, indeed, that Mr. Begin has made this week, while he takes a moment off from his killing in Lebanon.

JORDAN'S ARABIC PRESS EDITORIALS

Al Ra'i: Iranian allegations confuted by the continued aggression

The recent Iranian attack on Iraq has exposed the last lies and has dropped the last masks which the Iranian rulers have been using for the last two years to hide their rancour towards the Arab Nation and their strong alliance with the enemies of this Nation. The nature and the timing of the attack has exposed the reality of the Iranian regime and has uncovered the regimes which allege to be Arab while attacking from the Iranian trenches against the Arabs.

If some people have justified the Iranian allegation that the Iranians were defending their lands during the long months of the war, the Iranian invasion of the Iraqi territories has exposed the falsehood of the Iranian allegation and has proved that the Iranian regime wants to impose its hegemony on the states of the region. There is no doubt that the states which collaborated with the Iranian regime and supported it shared the aims and goals of the Iranians.

Al Dustour: Reagan's request to send Palestinians into new exile

News reports say that U.S. President Reagan has sent messages to a number of Arab countries asking them to participate in solving the Lebanese crisis, by finding a new shelter for the Palestinians that Israel insists on their leaving Lebanon, and threatens to use all it has of U.S.-made planes, rockets, cluster bombs and nerve gas in order to finish up the massacre of which the bloodthirsty murderer of Deir Yassin, the killer of international envoy Count Bernadotte and the Zionist minister of war are dreaming.

What is being asked is really very strange. The Israeli forces are invading a United Nations member state, the Israeli forces are besieging the capital city of this United Nations member state, but the U.S. president does not object to the invasion nor does he object to the siege. The U.S. President joins with the forces that besiege Beirut and asks the Palestinians to leave Beirut and regime sided with the Arabs against the Zionist enemy has also been exposed when the Iranian regime attacked Iraq at the same time when the Palestinian fighters have been able to attract international interest and move the international community to give priority to the Palestinian question. The rulers of Tehran wanted to deprive the Palestinian people of a precious political chance by diverting the attention of the world towards another region of tension. The Iranians are paying the bill of the massive Israeli military support they received by saving Israel from the suffocating political quick sand it fell into by invading Lebanon.

We cannot blame or accuse a regime like the Iranian regime because we knew of its plans of expansion and the reality of its intentions from the very beginning. But we must denounce and condemn the Arab regimes that are still standing in the Iranian trench.

Mr. President, Lebanon is a member in the Arab League. And despite the fact that your envoy has violated the sanctity of Lebanon by hosting Israeli war minister and the Israeli foreign ministry's director general now and then, the solid fact is that Lebanon is at a state of war with Israel. It is the first time in history when an invading army disperses a people and then, some 30 years later, it hunts these people again to drive them out of their exile to a newer one.

Mr. President, Lebanon is a member in the Arab League. And despite the fact that your envoy has violated the sanctity of Lebanon by hosting Israeli war minister and the Israeli foreign ministry's director general now and then, the solid fact is that Lebanon is at a state of war with Israel. It is the first time in history when an invading army disperses a people and then, some 30 years later, it hunts these people again to drive them out of their exile to a newer one.

What is being asked is really very strange. The Israeli forces are invading a United Nations member state, the Israeli forces are besieging the capital city of this United Nations member state, but the U.S. president does not object to the invasion nor does he object to the siege. The U.S. President joins with the forces that besiege Beirut and asks the Palestinians to leave Beirut and

Vietnamese hopes for socialist country are mere illusions

By Michael Fathers
Reuter

HO CHI MINH CITY — There is a sense of disillusionment among many intellectuals in southern Vietnam who had welcomed the Communist takeover in 1975 as the beginning of a new dawn for their war-weary country.

"We had an idealistic view of a socialist society and it's not to be found in the regime we have now," Ngo Cong Duc, former editor of Vietnam's only privately owned newspaper, Tin Xang, told Reuters.

"People will criticise me for saying this. We wanted liberal changes. We wanted to create an enlightened socialist country. What we have now is not that."

The most outspoken critic is former deputy health minister Duong Quyen Hoa, who in 1977 became the only Communist minister in Vietnam to leave office without the approval of the party.

A southerner and former health minister in the Viet Cong's provisional government (PRG), Mrs. Hoa said that a stifling bureaucracy, lost opportunities for using peoples' talents and official corruption had produced a feeling of inertia throughout the south.

Just indifference

She said in an interview: "There is no opposition nor resistance to the regime. There is just indifference, and the euphoria at liberation has been dissipated."

Mrs. Hoa is director of the children's hospital number two, Saigon's former gral hospital for seriously ill children. She said she resigned her portfolio so her talents could be better used for the benefit of her country. "When I was a deputy minister I even had to get a chit from the minister before I could visit a hospital. No one will take responsibility. People just pass paper and nothing gets done, so the country does not develop," she said in reference to Vietnam's bureaucracy.

"The things about the bureaucracy here is that it's a chain and many people are living off it. If it's cut back, as some party leaders want, the effect would touch all levels of Vietnamese society. Corrupt civil servants are difficult to punish in both the north and the south. It's like a Mafia. If you try to punish the offenders you'll find the hierarchy," Mrs. Hoa said.

Mr. Duc, 46, a former deputy in South Vietnam's national assembly under the American-backed government of President Nguyen Van Thieu, fled the country in 1971 to escape charges of associating with the Viet Cong. He was sentenced to three years in jail in his absence for leaving South Vietnam illegally and his property was confiscated. He lived in Sweden and France and returned to his home in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, in 1975 after North Vietnamese-led troops defeated the Thieu army and captured the city.

Known as a member of the "third force" — nationalists who were not Communists and who wanted an end to the war and the American presence in Vietnam — he was permitted to buy the newspaper Tin Xang and run it independently of the government. It was later turned into a cooperative. The newspaper was closed by the Hanoi authorities in June last year, bringing to an end its only independent public platform in Vietnam. Mr. Duc now manages a lacquer factory.

Self-censorship insufficient

"Tin Xang espoused socialism. We accepted the leadership of the Communist Party. We were an independent voice although we imposed our own self-censorship," he said.

"We published several articles about the economy and urged that professional people, such as doctors, be allowed to operate privately in addition to their government work. This is now happening to some extent," Mr. Duc said.

"We wanted the authorities to give encouragement to people from the old regime so that their talents could be utilised. Many people do not know how to operate under socialism. Those people from the former regime have much to contribute and they must be allowed time to change. It is a principle of this socialist government that the private sector must not be allowed to develop. We criticised the party's bureaucracy and we were strongly criticised in turn. Our circulation was about 120,000, which compared with the 40,000 circulation of Ho Chi Minh City's official government newspaper, Saigon-Giai Phong.

The newspaper was circulated from Cau Mau, at the southernmost tip of Vietnam, to Danang, the port near the former demilitarized zone which divided North and South Vietnam. The interview with Mr. Duc took place in the presence of an official from the Vietnamese foreign ministry. Mr. Duc refused to discuss politics in detail. He said that after 15 years as a politician he considered his best contribution to the reconstruction of Vietnam to be in the economic field.

Two voices not possible

Mr. Duc said he and his journalistic staff decided to close Tin Xang in accordance with the principles of the press in socialist countries. "We felt it was time to close because we knew many people in Hanoi were concerned that the press in socialist countries belongs to the Communist Party."

Mrs. Ngo Ba Thanh, a former prominent figure in the so-called third force, an opposition lawyer during the Thieu period, and now a deputy to the Vietnamese national assembly, said it was unrealistic to imagine an independent publication could continue indefinitely.

"I was asked if I would contribute to Tin Xang but I would not. Mr. Duc was required to sign an agreement with the authorities that an appropriate time the newspaper would be closed down," she told Reuters. "It is not possible to have two voices in Vietnam today."

TV & RADIO

WHAT'S GOING ON

FOR THE TRAVELLER

USEFUL TELEPHONE NOS.

JORDAN TELEVISION

BBC WORLD SERVICE

639, 720, 1413 KHz

MAIN CHANNEL
14:30	Korea
14:58	Fayruz
15:25	Ramadan Island
15:30	Local Programme
16:30	Sayings
16:45	Honesty
17:40	Small Stations
18:05	Religious Programme
18:25	Religious Programme
18:45	Tales from Hadramaut
19:45	Local Programmes
20:00	Arabic News in Arabic
20:20	The Holy Kaaba
21:35	Local Programme
22:10	Live relay of prayers from Mecca
22:10	News in Arabic

FOREIGN CHANNEL

RADIO JORDAN

855 KHz, AM & 99 MHz, FM

& partly on 9560 KHz, SW

Morning Show

News Summary

Morning Show

News Summary

One Hundred Great Paintings

Play of the Week

Sports Round-up

News in English

Pop Session

Pop Songs

Music Bulletin

Instrumentals

Picnic Time

Concert Hour

News Summary

25 Years of Rock

News Summary

Newspack

Sports Round-up

In Concert

Daybreak

9:00 News

Newspack

Megastore

Liquor Store

Liquor Store

Sports Round-up

Reports

News Summary

Date with a Star

Evening Show

News Summary

18:10 News

Magazine

Liquor Store

Violet, 'Attila the Nun', campaigns for Rhode Island's attorney general

By Bruce de Silva
Reuter

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island — Arlene Violet, a Roman Catholic Sister of Mercy whose friends call her "Attila the Nun," is campaigning to become Rhode Island's attorney general with enough problems to try the patience of a saint.

Her candidacy in this three-quarters Roman Catholic state is in defiance of the bishop of Providence, who forbade her to run.

She has no campaign treasury. She is a Republican in an overwhelmingly democratic state, and the democratic incumbent is a member of one of the state's most successful political families.

Yet political analysts give the 38-year-old nun and lawyer a good chance of victory.

Her campaign rhetoric, spoken rapid-fire in a nasal voice, sums up her appeal: "The last thing you need in that job is a professional politician."

Several other nuns hold elective office around the nation, with Sister Elizabeth Morancy, for example, sitting in the Rhode Island state legislature.

If Sister Violet were elected she would hold the highest office in the United States of any member of a Roman Catholic Order since Father Robert Drinan resigned his Massachusetts congressional seat in 1980 on orders from Pope John Paul.

Bishop Louis Gelineau of Providence has declared that the nun's candidacy violates church

Canon 139, the same one applied in Father Drinan's case.

The canon forbids priests from engaging in activities "alien or foreign to the clerical state." It is extended to nuns by another church law, Canon 592.

Sister Violet disagrees with Bishop Gelineau's interpretation of church law and is supported by the leaders of her Order. She insists that "the nun issue is a non-issue" and has turned her attention to her political opponent.

Dennis Roberts II, a two-term attorney general with ambitions for the governorship, is the son of a former Rhode Island governor and nephew of a former state Supreme Court chief justice.

Sister Violet, who was a lawyer bartended for the rights of the retarded, disabled and poor, says Mr. Roberts "serves his political party first."

She has accused Mr. Roberts of calling off an investigation of corruption in a State Department, tipping off the Democratic Party to an investigation of one of its leaders, using his office to harass political foes, failing to enforce a statute aimed at curbing the state's serious car theft problem and generally ignoring the duties of his office.

Mr. Roberts denies all wrongdoing and says he will run on his record. "The people appreciate the work I've done," he said.

Sister Violet said his record is "deplorable" and that it is "frightening to think he is going to run on it."

She announced her candidacy last month in front of a small house in Oakland Beach, a poor neighbourhood where she once organised activities for the elderly and ran a breakfast programme for poor children.

The audience was a busload of children from an inner-city housing project and a group of the poor and disabled.

She is running as a Republican, she said, because it is the best way for her to unseat the incumbent who is backed by the state's strong Democratic machine.

However, she insists she will remain politically independent.

"We call her Attila the Nun," James Healey, executive director of the Rhode Island association for retarded citizens, explained the day of the announcement.

"She's tough, persistent, even the Attila the Nun had his weaknesses, but I've never found a weak spot in Sister Violet."

JORDAN MARKETPLACE

RESTAURANTS & BARS

RESTAURANT CHINA
"The First & Best Chinese Restaurant in Jordan.
Firs. Circle, Jabal Amman
Near Al-Tayyibah Girls School
Open Daily
12:00 - 3:30 p.m.
6:30 p.m. - Midnight
Tel. 38868
Take Home Service Available

HALA INN
Special
Ramadan
Iftar
at
Al-Khalid Restaurant
For Reservations: Tel. 43106 - 43056
3rd Circle, Near Khalid Hospital

Lai Terresse
Welcomes you during the holy month of RAMADAN at THE ROOF:
• Delicious IFTAR meals
• Panoramic view
• Relaxing atmosphere
for reservations
Tel. 62831
Shmeisani

RESTAURANT TAIWAN TOURISMO
Opp: Aliaah Maternity Hospital 3rd Circle, Jabal Amman, Tel. 41083. Try our special "Flaming Pot" fondue or Peking Duck on your next visit. Take-away orders welcome. Welcome & Thank You.

N. FARDOUS RESTAURANT
Under New Management

Green House COFFEE SHOP
AT PHILADELPHIA HOTEL
OPEN FROM 6 IN THE MORNING
TILL 12 MIDNIGHT

MIRAMAR HOTEL AQABA
Air conditioned rooms.
Fair rates
Nice swimming pool
Snack bar by pool side
Special long term arrangements.
Tel. 04/4341 - 2 Aqaba
Tel. 62275 JO

AQABA

MANDARIN
Chinese Restaurant
AQABA
Invites you to enjoy the best service and the delicious Chinese Cuisine in the most quiet atmosphere.
Amman road
Tel. 4633

Hotel Sun Aquila
EVERY THURSDAY NIGHT
DINNER BUFFET
AND
DISCO PARTY
Res. 2427401 Aqaba
Where The Fun Never Stops

CHINA RESTAURANT
The first and best Chinese restaurant in Aqaba. Take-away service available.
Open daily 11:30-3:30,
6:30 - 11:00 p.m. Tel 4415

CHINA RESTAURANT
ABOVE HOMAN SUPERMARKET
MIGDALAT BANK
POST OFFICE
HOMAN HOUSE OFFICE
AL-AQABA BAR
ACABA MUNICIPALITY
JABAL AMMAN

HOTELS

JORDAN INTER-CONTINENTAL
IFTAR BUFFET DAILY During the Holy Month of Ramadan.
at okaz RESTAURANT

To advertise in this section
phone 6711-2-3

To advertise in this section
phone 6711-2-3

To advertise in this section
phone 6711-2-3

OPTICIANS

THE INTERCONTINENTAL HOTEL
CONTACT LENSE CENTRE
EYES EXAMINED
CONTACT LENSE
SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
AMMAN TEL. 42043

SABASTIA RESTAURANT
Korean Japanese Chinese Cuisine
Open daily:
Lunch 12.30 p.m.
Dinner 6.11.30 p.m.
reservation call 65161 Ext. 93
AMMANSOR HOTEL AQABA

THE SWIMMING POOL
at the
Hotel Jerusalem International Hotel
Not a mere pool to have a dip but a world of beauty to enjoy with your family.
For membership contact sales manager.
Tel. 65121/8

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST OPTICIAN IN TOWN
OPTIKOS INTERCONTINENTAL HOTEL
MODERATE PRICES SAME DAY DELIVERY
TEL: 42043 AMMAN

TRANSPORTATION

FOR:
SHIPPING-TRAVEL & TOURISM
INSURANCE-CLEARANCE
AIR FREIGHT-PACKING
PLEASE CONTACT:
AMIN KAWAR & SONS
Travel & Tourism
Tel. 37195, 22324-5-6-7-8-9
Tlx. 21212, 21520, 21634
P.O. Box 7806, Amman

CROWN INTERNATIONAL WORLDWIDE
Specializes in local & international removals
• shipping & forwarding (air, land, sea)
• storage • packing • crating • clearing
• door-to-door service
CROWN INTERNATIONAL
Amman, Jabal Hussein - Firs Circle
Tel. 64090 - Tlx. 22205 BESMCO JO
Aqaba: Tel. 5778

1982 models
WASSIM RENT-A-CAR
short & long term
TEL. 44579 - 43515
CAMEO HOTEL

MISCELLANEOUS

Multi-System
Room Air Conditioners
DAIKIN
Japan
Tel. 65364 & 65578

MEIE Real Estate
Your
Real Estate Agent
In Jordan
Tel. 42358, 42503
P.O. Box 35107 Amman
Tlx. 21867 Jo
NEW EDITION EDITION

SOME THINGS LAST FOREVER
Rosenthal studio-linie
Jabal Amman
2nd Circle
Tel. 41816

FINLANDIA
DISTINCTIVE GIFTS OF ALL SORTS
FINNISH DESIGN GLASS & EARTHENWARE
HOME & OFFICE FURNITURE
Our new Tel. No. 38494
See map for directions.

REPORTS

'Rebels, go home', Sowetans tell international soccer team

SOWETO. South Africa (R) — Several hundred blacks chanting 'rebels, go home' met the international soccer team which arrived in this black satellite city outside Johannesburg Sunday for the second match of a controversial two-week tour of South Africa.

But the visitors received a good-natured if lukewarm reception from about 3,000 spectators in Soweto's usually-packed stadium who watched them beat the undistinguished Durban team Amazulu.

The visitors scored their first goal in their two matches so far in winning 1-0.

Amazulu was hurriedly brought in Saturday night to replace the crack Soweto team Orlando Pirates, whose sudden withdrawal with two other Soweto black sides was a bitter blow to the tour organisers.

The boycott by the Sowetans came as Argentine World Cup players Osvaldo Ardiles and Mario Kempes flew off to Madrid after their clubs refused them permission to play in South Africa. Kempes plays for the Spanish team Valencia, and Ardiles is under contract to England's Tottenham Hotspur till July 31.

A statement explaining the withdrawal of the three Sowetan clubs, issued after they met anti-apartheid organisations, accused the tourists of violating the rules of soccer's international controlling body FIFA, which expelled South Africa in 1976.

The President of the Football Council of South Africa, George Thabe, has called a council meeting for Monday to discuss the withdrawal and try to get the Pirates, the Kaizer Chiefs and Moroko Swallows to change their minds.

All three sides have many fans among Soweto's estimated one million blacks and there is no doubt the poor turnout at Sunday's match added to the gloom among tour organisers.

Wilander, Sundstroem to meet in Swedish Grand Prix tennis final BAASTAD. Sweden (R) — Top seed Mats Wilander and fellow Swede Henrik Sundstroem Sunday qualified for Monday final of the Swedish Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Wilander, the French Open champion, defeated Argentina's Gustavo Tiberi 7-6, 6-3, winning a first set tie breaker 7-2, while Sundstroem easily disposed of another Swede, Thomas Hoegstedt, 6-2, 6-4 in the second semifinal.

In an all-Swedish men's doubles final Anders Jaerid and Hans Simonsson beat Wilander and Joakim Nystroem 6-1, 6-2, 7-6.

Clerc clinches $300,000 WCT tourney

ZELL AM SEE (R) — Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, the top seed, won the $300,000 World Championship Tennis (WCT) tournament here Sunday by beating unseeded Heinz Guenthardt of Switzerland 6-0, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

In a two-hour match interrupted twice by heavy rain, the Argentine clay-court specialist swept through the first set without losing a game but lost the second as his Swiss rival fought back gallantly.

However, Clerc piled on the pressure in the third and fourth sets for his third successive tournament victory, after wins in Venice and Gstaad, Switzerland.

Clerc, ranked fifth in the world, received a winner's cheque for $100,000. Guenthardt's prize was $52,000.

FOR RENT

Location: University of Jordan Housing Estate
A- Furnished one-bedroom apartment with telephone, central heating and garden.
B- Two bedroom furnished or unfurnished apartment with telephone, central heating, garden and garage.
For information call:
Tel. 42021 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
65595 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Soviets win 2nd world fencing title

ROME (R) — The Soviet Union won its second individual foil title in the World Fencing Championships Saturday night when Nailia Giliazova beat Italian Dorina Vaccaroni 8-6 in extra time.

The hard-fought final stood at 7-5 at the end of regular time, but Giliazova maintained her winning margin on the resumption to record a second Soviet victory after Alexandre Romanov won the men's individual title Saturday night.

Giliazova had a psychological advantage over Vaccaroni, having beaten the Italian girl 8-7 in the second round earlier in the evening.

The Soviet girl went on to trounce West German Cornelia Hanisch 8-2 in the third round, allowing Brigitte Gaudin of France only one point in the quarter-final and defeating Mandy Niklaus of East Germany 8-5 in the semi-final.

Vaccaroni burst into tears after her second-round defeat by Giliazova, who despite the narrow scoreline never looked threatened but fought back tenaciously in the Repechage competition which gives all defeated athletes a second chance.

HASHEMITE KINGDOM OF JORDAN THE JORDANIAN ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY LTD. (JEPCO)
Notice of invitation for the supply of transformers, cables, conductors, and accessories for the World Bank financed urban and rural electrification project in Amman

Bids are invited from World Bank member countries, Switzerland, and Taiwan for the following:-

JEP 840/IBRD - POWER AND DISTRIBUTION TRANSFORMERS

20 - 5/10 MVA - 33/11/6.6 KV power transformers
110 - 500/800/1000 KVA 11/6.6/0.4 KV distribution transformers

27-300/150 KVA 11/6.6/0.4 KV pole-mounted transformers

JEP 841/IBRD - UNDERGROUND CABLES

43 KMS - 33 KV HSL cable and accessories
145 KMS - 11 KV MIND cable and accessories
47 KMS - 1 KV PVC cable and accessories
55 KMS - Multicore cable and accessories

JEP 842/IBRD - CONDUCTORS

240 KMS - ACSR conductor and accessories
2000 KMS - HDC conductor and accessories

JEP 847/IBRD - UNIT SUBSTATIONS

70 - 500/1000 KVA unit type substations.

The tenders will be opened at the JEPCO offices in Amman at 12:00 hours local time on Wednesday Sept. 15, 1982. Tender documents may be inspected and purchased from the offices of Messrs. Kennedy & Donkin at the address below. Applications for tender documents must include a non-returnable fee of £25.00 for each complete set with which to tender. Documents will only be despatched on receipt of this fee.

Tender documents may also be inspected at the JEPCO offices in Amman.

Tenders are prepared in English and must be completed in duplicate. One master copy must be received by JEPCO in Amman, Jordan not later than 12:00 hours local time on Tuesday Sept. 15, 1982. A duplicate copy of the tender must be submitted to Kennedy & Donkin, Woking, England.

Jordanian Electric Power Co. Ltd.,
P.O. Box 618 (near 1st Circle)
Jabal Amman
Amman
Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan
Telex 21507 JEPCO JO

Kennedy and Donkin
Consulting Engineers,
Premier House,
Woking, Surrey,
England.
Telex 859373 KDHO G

Britain's Moorcroft close to shattering world record

LONDON (R) — Britain's David Moorcroft came close to shattering a second world record within 11 days when he beat a number of the world's best middle distance men over 3,000 metres at Crystal Palace here Saturday night.

Moorcroft, who clipped almost six seconds off the 5,000 metres record in Oslo on July 7, ran a blistering last lap in 54.4 seconds to finish in seven minutes 32.79 seconds, just outside Kenyan Henry Rono's world mark of 7:32.10.

It was the second fastest 3,000 metres ever and broke the European record held by his friend Briton Brendan Foster by three seconds.

Maree, a South African-born runner who lives in the United States, was second in 7:33.37, and New Zealand's John Walker third in 7:37.49.

The early pace in the race, the climax of a match between England, Spain, Kenya and Japan, was set by Mike Boit.

Boit, a late replacement for fellow countryman Rono, took the head and body of the challenger.

In the middle rounds Kalule, a southpaw, continued to press the champion, mixing up his attack to the head and body. But Moore countered with uppercuts, hooks and right-hand leads to the challenger's face and body.

Kalule, whose record is now 40-2 with 19 knockouts, lost his title on June 25, 1981, when Sugar Ray Leonard stopped him in the ninth round at Houston.

Moore, a 23-year-old New Yorker appearing in his 11th professional fight, pummelled Kalule with head and body shots despite a badly cut and nearly closed left eye.

Kalule, who fights out of Denmark, opened up in the first three rounds with a punishing body attack while Moore kept missing with his combinations.

Moore round his timing in the third round and started getting in with his combinations as he raked the head and body of the challenger.

In the middle rounds Kalule, a southpaw, continued to press the champion, mixing up his attack to the head and body. But Moore countered with uppercuts, hooks and right-hand leads to the challenger's face and body.

Kalule, whose record is now 40-2 with 19 knockouts, lost his title on June 25, 1981, when Sugar Ray Leonard stopped him in the ninth round at Houston.

Moore, a 23-year-old New Yorker appearing in his 11th professional fight, pummelled Kalule with head and body shots despite a badly cut and nearly closed left eye.

Kalule, who fights out of Denmark, opened up in the first three rounds with a punishing body attack while Moore kept missing with his combinations.

Moore round his timing in the third round and started getting in with his combinations as he raked

CAR FOR SALE

1976 Volvo sedan for sale.
Duty paid. In excellent condition.

Price: JD 2,600. Call Mr. Old, 61014-5

FURNISHED APARTMENT FOR RENT

Two bedrooms, salon, dining room, sitting room, glassed-in veranda, completely furnished with independent central heating and telephone.

Location: Jabal Amman, between 4th and 5th circles.
Please contact Tel. 43550.

IRAQI ARTISTA. JABBAR SALMAN

Cordially invites you to the opening of his

EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS

of Arab bedouins

at the

AMMAN SHERATON PALACE HOTEL

on Monday July 19, till July 21

OPEN INVITATION

open invitation

Ali After The Royal Jordanian Airlines

INVITES APPLICATION FOR PREQUALIFICATIONFOR CIVIL ENGINEERING WORKS AND EQUIPMENT INSTALLATION of a 100,000 lb thrust jet engine test facility to be located at Queen Alia International Airport.

Experienced foreign and local contractors may obtain prequalification questionnaire and submit it prior to Aug. 31, 1982 from the consultants:

Arabair Services Corporation
Jabal Amman - 3rd Circle
P.O. Box 3148 - Amman, Jordan
Tel: 44585 - 41602
Tlx: 21858 ARABAIR JO

Lauda romps to unchallenged triumph in British Grand PrixBRANDS HATCH, England (R)

Niki Lauda underlined his splendid comeback by romping to an unchallenged victory in the British Grand Prix motor race here Sunday.

The 33-year-old Austrian, who returned to Formula One this season after a two-year retirement, now has a fine chance of lifting the World Championship for the third time.

The nine points Lauda gained from his second Grand Prix success for McLaren this year — also won at Long Beach in April — took him from seventh to third place in the title battle.

Ahead of Lauda, who claimed the crown in 1975 and 1977 — and was almost killed at West Germany's notorious Nuerburgring circuit in between — are French man Didier Pironi and Britain's John Watson.

Pironi swept to the top of the drivers' standings by finishing runner-up, almost 26 seconds adrift of Lauda in his Ferrari.

Unlucky Watson, the pre-race championship leader by one point from Pironi, dropped out attempting to avoid two colliding cars with only two laps of the 76-lap (319.67 km.) event completed. He slid off the track and said he could not restart his McLaren.

With six races remaining, Pironi leads the championship with 35 points followed by Watson (31) and Lauda (24).

Patrick Tambay, who joined the Ferrari stable as a replacement for Canadian Gilles Villeneuve, who was almost killed at the Belgian Grand Prix, snatched third place behind his team mate and compatriot.

Tambay shot past the Lotus of Italy's Elio de Angelis in a thrilling last-lap duel with the Williams of Ireland's Derek Daly and Renault of Frenchman Alain Prost disputing fifth and sixth places.

Daly was credited with fifth position and Prost sixth in the blanket finish.

Lauda went to the front on the 10th lap in his McLaren when initial pacesetter, reigning champion Nelson Piquet of Brazil, ground to a halt in his Brabham, apparently with engine failure.

From then on there was no stopping the shrewdest driver in Formula One. The Austrian ace soon opened up a healthy gap over his rivals and coolly maintained the advantage to the finish.

American Tom Watson wins British Open Golf ChampionshipTROON, Scotland (R)

Tom Watson became only the second American to win four British Open Golf Championships when he won the 1982 title by one stroke Sunday.

Watson, fifth at the start of the day, had a steady two-under-par 70 Sunday to total 284 for the four-round championship.

South African Nick Price, second overnight behind American Bobby Clampett, provided the only real opposition. But he faltered with four holes to go, finishing with 73 to share second place with Britain's Peter Osterhuis on 285.

The title was worth £32,000 ($52,000) to Watson while Price and Osterhuis, who shot a 70 Sunday, each collected £19,300 ($33,000).

"I'm very pleased to be champion again but I feel very sorry for Nick Price," Watson said.

The legendary Walter Hagen is the only other American to have won four British Opens and Watson, 32, also becomes only the fifth man to win the U.S. and British Open titles in the same year.

The other four, also Americans, were Lee Trevino in 1971, Ben Hogan in 1953, Gene Sarazen in 1932 and Bobby Jones in 1926 and 1930.

Price, 25, fought magnificently before faltering badly on the crucial final holes.

He led for most of the day, and though Watson snatched a one-stroke lead with an eagle three at the 11th hole while Price bogeyed the ninth, the South African struck back and was soon three shots in front again.

But he dropped a shot on the 13th and then had a disastrous double-bogey six on the long par-four 15th to fall back into a tie with the American.

At that stage Watson had finished his round with three successive pars and a four-under total of 282 and Price needed three more pars to force an 18-hole play-off Monday.

But he dropped a stroke on the 17th when he missed a six-foot putt and needed to hole a 35-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th. The South African's brave attempt fell an agonising foot short to leave him a stroke behind Watson.

Four men shared fourth place on 286 — American Tom Purtzer, Japanese newcomer Masahiro Kuramoto, nick Faldo of Britain and Irishman Des Smyth.

Hinault powers his way to victory in 14th stage of tourMARTIGUES, France

U.K. train drivers end strike

LONDON (R) — Train drivers Sunday called off strike which has crippled Britain's rail network for two weeks.

Mr. Ray Buckton, leader of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen (ASLEF), told a news conference that the stoppage would end at midnight Sunday.

He said the strike could not succeed without the support of the whole trade unions movement and this support was not forthcoming.

ASLEF's decision to call off the strike was a clear victory for British Rail.

Political sources said trade union bosses had not been willing to back ASLEF as this would have jeopardised the entire rail system and put thousands of jobs in dependent industries at risk.

It came the day after Britain's leading trade unionists made it clear that they did not support ASLEF's strike, which was called in protest against the introduction of more flexible work rosters.

They said that BR had convinced the trade union leaders it was not prepared to back down on the issue of the new rosters.

The rosters are intended to make more efficient use of drivers' working time and cut back financial losses. The Conservative government has firmly backed BR in the dispute.

S. Arabia may keep oil output, price unchanged

NICOSIA (R) — Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, will probably keep its oil prices and production unchanged following the collapse this month of an OPEC agreement on output curbs to prop up prices, the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) said Sunday.

But the Nicosia-based trade weekly added that no decision was expected before the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan ends on July 22.

Iraq and Libya demanded

higher output quotas within an existing OPEC (Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries) overall ceiling of 17.5 million barrels daily. They wanted Saudi Arabia to reduce its production to accommodate their extra output.

MEES said that despite the break-up of the OPEC talks in Vienna on July 10 and Saudi Arabia's subsequent position that it could adjust its prices and output as it liked, it was unlikely that the kingdom would demonstrate its power by cutting prices and boosting production.

According to MEES, Saudi Arabia had two alternatives: To keep its price unchanged at $34 a barrel and maintain its seven million barrels daily output ceiling, or to make a token price cut of perhaps 50 cents a barrel.

The first alternative was the "most likely and preferred scenario," said MEES. The second would be ineffective and could trigger a price war.

But the Nicosia-based trade weekly added that no decision was expected before the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan ends on July 22.

Iraq and Libya demanded

Britain 'to relax sanctions against Argentina'

LONDON (R) — The British government will soon relax the economic sanctions it imposed on Argentina during the conflict over the Falkland Islands, political sources said Sunday. The blockade zone around the islands which Britain declared closed to Argentine ships and planes will be reduced in size, and restrictions on trade with and investment in Argentina will be eased, the sources said.

Computerised components save capital

This futuristic array of equipment is part of a flexible manufacturing system being developed to automatically produce small batches of precision engineering components virtually on demand. The new system does away with the need to shelf costly stocks of components.

The picture shows the 40-tool turret of one of two KTM 560 machining centres from which a suitable cutting tool is automatically selected for the task in hand. Each machine has its own auxiliary tool storage system, allowing any one of 80 different tools to be robot selected from carousels and placed into the required turret position — each turret being able to perform on X, Y and Z axes.

Both machining centres share the input of work and are linked to computers programmed to allow a wide range of complex machining operations. Blank workpieces for component manufacture are fed into the machines from a four-station rotating pallet. (LPS photo)

Banking industry can weather crises despite severe strains

LONDON (R) — The world banking industry is undergoing severe strains, but bankers are confident they can weather the storms that have blown up on both sides of the Atlantic.

Recently, financial markets have been buffeted almost daily by rumours of an impending bank collapse to add to the problems caused by threats of defaults on huge loans by Poland, other Eastern Bloc countries and Latin America.

But Reuter correspondents report that while some bankers in North America and Europe are jittery over the latest misadventures to beset the industry, most of them are confident that the rash of scandals, shaky debts and bankruptcies can be contained.

Last week the relatively unknown Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma, heavily involved in funding oil exploration, sent shudders through world financial markets when it said its loan portfolio was riddled with losses.

As the price of bank shares

tumbled on stock markets, rumours spread that Poland, with $2.7 billion in debts, would unilaterally declare itself bankrupt, and AEG-Telefunken, the West German electrical goods maker, was desperately seeking a way to stay afloat.

However, bankers surveyed by Reuter correspondents felt that none of these problems was enough to threaten the tight-knit web of the global financial system and plunge the world into a deeper recession.

Even in Europe, Roberto Calvi, the head of Italy's biggest private bank, Banco Ambrosiano, with links to the Vatican and extensive interests in Latin America, the Caribbean and elsewhere, was found hanging from a London bridge last month.

He had disappeared from Italy after police launched an investigation of the bank and its overseas operations.

As the price of bank shares

tumbled on stock markets, rumours spread that Poland, with $2.7 billion in debts, would unilaterally declare itself bankrupt, and AEG-Telefunken, the West German electrical goods maker, was desperately seeking a way to stay afloat.

They admitted that the failure of Penn Square Bank, the cash crunch at AEG-Telefunken, the threat of a Polish loan default and the lingering questions over Drysdale Government Securities made them more nervous than ever.

To these problems were added a tight domestic money market in West Germany and fears that the Federal Reserve Board would hold tight in the United States and keep interest rates high.

Mr. Hans Friderichs, chief spokesman for Dresdner Bank and former West German economics minister, said recently that he doubted world economic problems alone would cause international capital markets to collapse.

But Mr. Friderichs said that adding political problems to the strained economic situation could prove more dangerous, an allusion to trade disputes between Europe and the United States and Washington's use of economic sanctions against Moscow.

Mr. Klaus Wierners, chief economist at Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale, said that fears expressed in the markets, although exaggerated, could have positive effects.

"These rumours should drive home to bankers that something could happen if they don't watch out," he said.

Mr. Wierners saw little real danger for the West German banking system because limits on bank holdings of foreign exchange would prevent a repeat of the problem that led to the collapse of the Herstatt Bank eight years ago, which sparked a crisis in European financial circles.

"The transparency of the system is greater now, and therefore so is the trust," he said.

In Zurich, Swiss bankers commented that while the markets had been unsettled by recent events, they have since calmed down, a sign that confidence has been regained.

But Swiss bankers expect that the Polish loan issue will continue to be a worry and say Austrian banks, which proportionately have lent the most money, to be worst hit in the event of a moratorium by Warsaw on repayments. They would be followed, to a lesser extent, by West German banks.

The major Swiss lenders to Poland would not be seriously over-taxed by a default, they said, since they had already made provisions for a potential loss.

They saw some encouraging signs on other problems.

The Swiss cited the rescue operation being put together for Banco Ambrosiano and the belief that a package could also be worked out to save AEG as two plus signs.

In London, bankers felt that the major British banks were relatively better insulated than their overseas rivals because of significantly stronger financial positions.

Their loan portfolios were also much more broadly spread than regional U.S. and Canadian banks, for instance, which dealt with the oil industry or a similarly small range of borrowers.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JULY 19, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to use your strong character and personality to eliminate problems and remove any antagonism directed toward you. Make necessary decisions and stick by them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget a secret annoyance and engage in more important activities. Strive for better relations with associates.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your special charm and gain your finest aims with others. Exercise more economy in business transactions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Although you may feel irritated for personal reasons, don't let it interfere with regular routines. Take health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) It would be wise to follow suggestions of higher-ups who are serious and level-headed. Keep poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after personal aims in a logical way and get excellent results. Keep calm when dealing with questionable characters.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are now able to get the backing of an influential person. Engage in civic work that brings out your best talent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle business duties early in the day for best results. Take a more active part in a group affair in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to use tact with an associate to get the results you want. Strive to be more successful in career activities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) This is a good day to make plans to have greater abundance in the future. Avoid one who wants to waste your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make joint plans with associates to have greater production in the days ahead. Show increased devotion to loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't make any comments on the job that could stir up trouble. Put your talents to work and get fine results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Instead of finding fault with an opponent, get busy perfecting own affairs. Show higher-ups that you have wisdom.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she must be controlled early in life, or there could be a tendency to get into troublesome situations. There could be much success in this chart if a good education is provided. Be sure to give ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

THE Daily Crossword

by Judson G. Trent

ACROSS	31	Mean Joe —	53	Wound cover	24	Legislator
1	Crab part	35	Et —	54	Quencher	26	London
2	Slipper	36	Regal Norse	57	Semester	27	press lord
3	Judicial	proceedings	name	59	Wear away	28	Croatian territory
4	Nimbus	38	Old German	63	TV adjunct	29	Defense
5	Places for	40	Points	66	Pip	30	plea
6	conductors	41	Knots	68	Downs	31	Nepal neighbor
7	Rebuff	42	Star in	69	Other Sp.	32	Palindrome for Merman
8	Maleficence	43	Lyra	70	Beechnuts	33	Verdugo of films
9	Far from a	45	Incites	71	Musical symbol	34	Israel desert
10	pittance	46	Early	72	Lear character	35	Remove
11	Ricochet	47	Nippon	73	Down	36	Miles and Ralston
12	Disease	48	capital	74	Sonny's ex	37	Caustic wit
13	Volstead	49	endings	75	Scoria	38	comb. form
14	Slight	50	Like a	76	Arabic letter	39	chin
15	Balneation	51	marquis	77	Priest, in 29D	40	Kind of paper
16	milieu	52	Old German	78	Facket wood	41	Khachaturian
17		53	militarist	79	of thunder	42	Wanes Bulk
18		54	Illed, a.g.	80	Pinnacle	43	Poker money
19		55	answering	81	Trappist	44	Bruce of films
20		56	peer	82	Tarpezioids	45	QED word ending
21		57		83	Trappist	46	Nononsense

Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

BASIC	SHOW	NICK
EVEIL	SNARE	ONZE
AETA	TIENDER	TRAP
TRAPPERS	LIBERI	TRAP
TRAPPIED	PURPLE	TRAP
SATRIE	TRAPPIED	TRAP
GRAB	CRAB	FBI
LEAPS	HAD	ESTOC
ANC	TRIPOD	TELE
BATT	TRAPS	YARNER
RIGS	ANSIA	YARNER
OCTAO	TRAPPIST	YARNER
TRAPEZOIDS	POKE	YARNER
TARP	INGOT	YEWER
DOWNS	PEER	DAWN

WORLD

Bolivian junta turns down new bidder for leadership

LA PAZ (R) — Bolivia's political crisis deepened Sunday after the military high command rejected a bid by Col. Faustino Rico Toro to make himself president in place of Gen. Celso Torrello.

The commander-in-chief of the armed forces and the commanders-in-chief of the army, navy and air force issued a communiqué last night rejecting Col. Rico Toro's bid for the presidency and describing his attitude as subversive.

Col. Rico Toro told reporters Saturday that he had the solid backing of the army to take over the presidency and supervise a rapid return to democracy.

The communiqué endorsed President Torrello's own announcement on Friday that elections and a return to democratic rule would take place next year and confirmed earlier reports that the president had submitted his resignation verbally.

"The political position of Col. Faustino Rico Toro, made public Sunday, does not represent the high command's communiqué, police security was being tightened throughout the country."

It added the colonel's position represented a "typically subversive attitude" aimed at thwarting the process of a return to constitutional rule initiated by President Torrello by mandate of the armed forces.

'In due course'

The communiqué said the high command was considering President Torrello's resignation and would make an announcement on the issue in due course.

It warned that his stepping down should not serve as a pretext for any military officer to adopt positions contrary to armed forces regulations or to act in defiance of the chain of command.

Police chiefs issued a separate statement saying that following the high command's communiqué, police security was being tightened throughout the country.

Col. Rico Toro, who is head of the military academy in La Paz, could not immediately be reached for comment.

Yesterday the colonel said it was up to senior military commanders to resolve Bolivia's present political crisis.

But he warned that if he were not made president in place of Gen. Torrello, the army would withdraw from the government, leaving administration in the hands of the navy and air force.

Col. Rico Toro also said that army commanders meeting on Wednesday had demanded the resignation of Gen. Torrello and the appointment of himself as president.

He warned that if he were not made president in place of Gen. Torrello, the army would withdraw from the government, leaving administration in the hands of the navy and air force.

Col. Rico Toro also said that army commanders meeting on Wednesday had demanded the resignation of Gen. Torrello and the appointment of himself as president.

Col. Rico Toro told reporters Saturday that he had the solid backing of the army to take over the presidency and supervise a rapid return to democracy.

The communiqué endorsed

President Torrello's own announcement on Friday that elections and a return to democratic rule would take place next year and confirmed earlier reports that the president had submitted

Buckingham prowler says queen's security diabolical

LONDON (R) — A prowler who climbed a Buckingham Palace drain pipe to slip into Queen Elizabeth's bedroom was quoted Sunday as telling her: "Your security here is diabolical."

The mass-circulation News of the World reported under a front-page headline "My chat with her majesty" that intruder Michael Fagan sat on the queen's bed in the early hours of the morning pouring out his domestic troubles while she sat listening propped up on pillows.

The palace break-in nine days ago has caused a major political row in Britain and a security shake-up at the queen's official London residence.

Press accounts have spoken of alarm bells that did not work or being switched off, police guards slipping away for tea breaks and even paddling in the royal goldfish pools, footmen away from their usual posts exercising the royal Corgi dogs, and delay in responding to the queen's telephone appeal for help.

The News of the World quoted Fagan's sister, Mrs. Margaret Tomlin, as saying he told her in the London jail where he is being held that he paddled barefoot into the royal bedchamber on the first floor of the palace, sat on her bed and announced: "I'm one of your subjects..."

He said after spending some minutes relating his family problems, "I told her how easy it had been for me to get into the palace."

Fagan said: "The queen looked astonished...but she wasn't nervous or worried. She told me: 'Please carry on.'"

He said after spending some minutes relating his family problems, "I told her how easy it had been for me to get into the palace."

Fagan said the queen arched a royal eyebrow at him and looked at him very closely. He added: "I felt I had nothing to lose so I said: 'I think you ought to do something about your security here because it's diabolical. Anyone can walk in if they want to.'

Singapore gives cool reception to Hanoi envoy upon arrival

SINGAPORE (R) — Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach arrived in Singapore Sunday to a low-key welcome and declared: "My visit is for peace, stability, cooperation and friendship."

His visit marks the beginning of a Southeast Asian tour aiming to find a solution to the Kampuchean conflict.

Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, who invited Mr. Thach to Singapore, was not on hand to welcome Mr. Thach and was represented only by a junior official, but the two men are to meet for formal talks and a private lunch Monday.

Singapore has taken a tough stand against the Vietnamese military occupation of Kampuchea and has been cool and cautious towards a recent offer by Hanoi to withdraw a significant number of the estimated 180,000 Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea.

The official Vietnam News Agency said on the eve of Mr. Thach's tour that six army units had begun to withdraw from Kampuchea. This was in line with a communiqué issued by the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos at a meeting 10 days ago in Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon).

But official sources here said the pullout would be meaningless unless it were linked with eventual removal of all Vietnamese troops.

They also dismissed Mr. Thach's suggestion of a "safety zone" along the Thai-Kampuchean border but appeared keen to hear his views on an international conference on Kampuchea.

Mr. Thach has suggested that such a conference should include the five permanent members of the U.N. security council as well as Southeast Asian countries interested in the issue.

The sources said they did not expect any sudden breakthrough following Mr. Thach's visit but the exchanges could provide some indication of the latest thinking on Kampuchea by Vietnam and its main ally, the Soviet Union.

Mr. Thach said he would make a statement before leaving on Wednesday for the Burmese capital, Rangoon.

He will also be visiting Malaysia and Thailand during his current tour and will go later to Indonesia and the Philippines, which, with Singapore, make up the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES E. GOREN

© 1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

What do you bid now?

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ ♦AK7 ♦93 ♦KQJ652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
? What do you bid now?

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AK3 ♦AKQJ93 ♦8 ♦K16
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT 3 ♠

? What action do you take?

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KQJ5 ♦A ♦954 ♦KQ952
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

? What do you bid now?

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦4 ♦KQ1083 ♦KJ9852 ♦7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠
3 ♠ Pass ? What do you bid now?

China warns Shultz against Taiwan lobby

PEKING (R) — China warned U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz Sunday that the Reagan administration would sabotage Sino-U.S. relations if it bowed to pressure from Washington's pro-Taiwan lobby.

In the first detailed official reaction to his appointment, the People's Daily made it clear that Peking, though taken aback by some of his comments, would reserve judgment until it saw how he implemented policy in practice.

The official commentary concentrated most of its fire on the conservative pro-Taiwan Senator Barry Goldwater.

"Sino-U.S. relations would be sabotaged if the views held by Goldwater and his ilk prevail," it said.

Responding to questions from Mr. Goldwater last Wednesday, Mr. Shultz said he would recommend to President Reagan that he act promptly to supply new fighter aircraft to Taiwan despite sharp warnings from Peking against further arms sales.

Castro promises more aid to Nicaragua

MANAGUA (R) — Cuban leader Fidel Castro has promised to continue backing Nicaragua's leftist government in the face of what he called U.S. aggression.

"The people and government of Cuba will never fail you," Dr. Castro said in a letter sent to the Nicaraguan revolutionary junta for its third anniversary in power on July 19.

But Dr. Castro made no mention of Cuban military assistance, even though his letter said Nicaragua was suffering from raids by Rightist guerrillas backed by the United States.

Nicaragua's Sandinist authorities say these attacks have intensified during the past few days with an invasion of the country by "counter-revolutionary military units."

PLO delegates attend Nicosia meeting

Farouk Kaddoumi, (left), head of the Political Department of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) and another Palestinian delegate, Abdellatif Abuheesh (right) listen to speeches during the non-aligned ministerial extraordinary meeting on the Lebanese crisis which went into its third day here Saturday. (A.P. radiophoto)

Sidon refugees return to their camps

By Alan Philips
Reuters

SIDON, Lebanon (—) Thousands of Palestinian refugees, shunned by the people of South Lebanon, are returning to live in the rubble of their devastated camps outside this biblical port city.

The sprawling Ain Al Helwe camp was flattened by a five-day bombardment at the start of Israel's invasion of Lebanon on June 6 and virtually abandoned.

Many of the estimated 50,000 to 70,000 refugees set up makeshift homes in shell-battered apartment blocks in Sidon but now they are being asked to go back to the camp.

Local residents say loudspeaker vans toured the city last week calling on the squatters to return to Ain Al Helwe, home for many of them since they fled the newly-established state of Israel in 1948.

As many as 10,000 Palestinians are now back in the camp, sleeping in the open or in odd surviving rooms.

On a recent tour of Ain Al Helwe, girls in colourful Palestinian dress could be seen going through the rubble of their homes with pickaxes, retrieving a water tap here, a shoe there.

Bulldozers from the Sidon Municipality crushed the debris of 35 years' existence into neat piles to clear the camp's main street.

The refugee camp is now almost empty of young men. Those who did not flee before the Israeli advance are being held in detention camps in South Lebanon or Israel as commando suspects, though some are beginning to return.

Nowhere to go

Reporters' questions were met with a mixture of confusion and hostility. One old man said: "They have destroyed my house and taken my sons. What can I do now?"

Asked where he would go, he replied: "We have nowhere to go. This is our only home".

Israel's invasion has opened a new chapter in the Palestinians' tale of woe but foreign aid officials both in Sidon and in Beirut, 60 kilometres to the North, say their problems are just beginning.

Ralph Miller, of the Mennonite Central Committee, a U.S. Protestant Church group that has already given some aid to the Palestinians, said: "The real crunch is coming at the end of September when the weather begins to get colder."

Palestinian families, who are mostly lacking their breadwinners, are currently living off their savings, he said. But food prices are rising and better shelter will be needed when winter comes.

Mr. Miller is one of the few foreign aid officers who stayed in the Sidon area throughout the invasion, spending four days in an underground shelter during the worst of the fighting.

He said a further cause for concern is the growing enmity felt by the people of South Lebanon for the refugees.

Marcos says rebels want attention

MANILA (R) — President Ferdinand Marcos said Sunday, Muslim rebels were intensifying activities in the Southern Philippines to gain attention and support from the Islamic Conference Organisation which meets in Niger next month.

He said the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), which has been waging a secessionist campaign in predominantly Catholic Philippines, was racked internally by a leadership struggle and many of its men have surrendered.

Ugandan troops destroy 3 guerrilla camps

NAIROBI (R) — Uganda government troops have destroyed three guerrilla camps in the Mpigi district, 40 kilometres southwest of Kampala, Radio Uganda reported Sunday.

The radio said local journalists who visited the area were shown arms, ammunition, equipment and other items captured by government forces. It made no mention of any guerrillas being captured.

Interior Minister John Luwuliza-Kirunda said recent attacks in the Kampala area were the work of bandits who had been driven from surrounding areas.

MIDDLE EAST NEWS BRIEFS

Pope prays for M.E. war victims

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (R) — Pope John Paul urged 6,000 pilgrims flocking to the square of his summer residence today to pray for the victims of the Gulf war between Iran and Iraq and of the war in Lebanon. During his first Sunday Angelus here this summer, the pope said: "Let us remember the sufferings of the people of Beirut, besieged for several weeks, with frequent bombardments and deprived of necessities. Let us pray to the Lord for the intercession of Maria to alleviate so much pain and to console those who are in anguish and danger."

Numeiri visits Jeddah

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (R) — Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiri flew to Saudi Arabia Saturday for talks with Saudi leaders on the latest Middle East developments. Asked whether his visit to Saudi Arabia was related to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's recent call for an Arab summit, Mr. Numeiri said the Egyptian initiative needed more time to follow up than he would have in Saudi Arabia. President Mubarak called on Thursday for meeting of Arab leaders to discuss the Lebanese crisis, the Iraq-Iran war and the Somalia-Ethiopia dispute. President Numeiri, who has been in Egypt on a private visit for the past two weeks, is expected to spend two days in Saudi Arabia.

Morocco to boycott next OAU meeting

RABAT (R) — Moroccan Foreign Minister M'hamed Boucetta was quoted as saying Saturday that necessary quorum of two-thirds member states will not attend the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) summit due to be held in Tripoli next month. According to the Moroccan News Agency MAP, Mr. Boucetta was speaking on his return from a tour of African countries. He referred to a possible boycott of the meeting by a number of states led by Morocco if the Saharan Democratic Republic (SADR) is proclaimed by the Polisario Front.

They described the charge against Mr. Medvedkov, a geographer who has worked for the World Health Organisation (WHO) abroad, and Mr. Khrushchev, a physicist, as fabricated.

Civil marriage becomes legal in Greece

ATHENS (R) — Civil marriages became legal Sunday for the first time in modern Greek history, dealing a blow to the once all-powerful Orthodox Church.

Until now, the 97 percent of Greeks who are nominally Orthodox have been able to marry only at colourful ceremonies in the country's Myriad Byzantine-style churches.

The change followed a near-unanimous vote in parliament six weeks ago. Politicians across a wide spectrum hailed it as a major social reform, while reactions by the church ranged from resignation to outright hostility.

U.S. based M.E. corporation changes corporate name

WASHINGTON (Agencies) — The Centre for U.S.-European Middle East Cooperation has changed its corporate name to Centre for Middle East Policy, in order to accommodate inclusion of a Japanese dimension in the centre's broadened focus on the major industrial democracies and the Middle East. Centre President John Richardson explained: "We have been planning for some time to re-direct the centre's programme to take account of Japan's stake in a stable Middle East, which equals if not exceeds that of the United States and Western Europe. The centre's new name reflects the organisation's attention to the Middle East policy and removes the previous sense of restriction on the centre's work to the Atlantic Community alone."

Dispute over tree kills